A meeting was afterwards organized and the various candidates aired their views of municipal matters. The attendance of electors was not large. Mayor James was first called on and gave a satisfactory account of his stewardship. Mr. Joy then laid his case before the people.

Mr. J. Aylsworth, one of the candidates for the Reeveship, was next called upon. He referred to his ten years' service in the council and considered he was entitled to promotion. His record as councillor was the only guarantee he had to offer for his course in the higher office, if elected. He trusted the ratepayers who had reposed confidence in him in the past would not withhold it now. He was at the close greeted with loud applause.

Mr. Uriah Wilson was the next speaker. He produced a book of figures compiled from the annual reports of the County Council, and proceeded to give the electors an insight into the financial standing of the county. The reading of these enabled Mr. Wilson to spin out his speech to a respectable length and make it quite formidable. But as the same figures are printed every year at an expense of about $200 to the county, and any elector can obtain a copy from the Clerk free of cost, it would be waste of space to reproduce them. After he had dispensed this fund of cheap knowledge, and made some reference to what he considered was mismanagement on the part of the town council in not paying the $2,000 debenture due in 1883, he indulged in a little egotistical bluster. He considered that matters of unusual importance would arise in the county council next year, and it was necessary to have "some fellow there who has had experience and could treat the members well and get all he could for the town." He gave the people to understand pretty distinctly that "the fellow" who could do this up to the hilt was himself. Mr. Aylsworth had no such personal magnetism in his composition as he had. He considered that Mr. Aylsworth should learn to creep before he began to walk, and should aspire only to the Deputy-Reeveship. After some further remarks of a general character he took his seat.

Mr. Aylsworth asked Mr. Wilson if it was presumption on his (Mr. A.'s) part to aspire to the Reeveship, was it not presumption in Mr. Wilson to step into the Warden's chair over Mr. Herring, who had been Reeve for years. (Applause.)

Mr. Wilson with becoming modesty explained that he was selected Warden because he was better fitted for the office than Mr. Herring.

Mr. T. G. Carscallen on coming forward complained that Mr. Wilson had taken all the wind out of his sails by taking the figures out of his book, which elicited loud

THE BLOOMFIELD MURDER.

free of cost, and would be waste of space to reproduce them. After he had dispensed this fund of cheap knowledge, and made some reference to what he considered was mismanagement on the part of the town council in not paying the $2,000 debenture due in 1883,
he indulged in a little egotistical bluster.
He considered that matters of unusual importance would arise in the county council next year, and it was necessary to have
"some fellow there who has had experience and could treat the members well and get all he could for the town." He gave the people to understand pretty distinctly that
"the fellow" who could do this up to the handle was himself. Mr. Aylsworth had no such personal magnetism in his composition
as he had. He considered that Mr. Ayls-worth should learn to creep before he began to walk, and should aspire only to the Deputy-Reeveship. After some further remarks of a general character he took his seat.

Mr. Aylsworth asked Mr. Wilson if it was presumption on his (Mr. A.'s) part to aspire to the Reeveship, was it not presumption in Mr. Wilson to step into the Warden's chair over Mr. Herring, who had been Reeve for years. (Applause.)

Mr. Wilson with becoming modesty explained that he was selected Warden because he was better fitted for the office than Mr. Herring.

Mr. T. G. Carseallen on coming forward complained that Mr. Wilson had taken all the wind out of his sails by taking the figures out of his book, which elicited loud laughter. The speaker seeing the "bull" he had made, qualified the remark by saying that the figures were the same as he had intended using. [The figures were in Mr.
Roe's handwriting and were no doubt intended for both.] He claimed credit for having improved the appearance of the county buildings and grounds, and for having been a regular attendant of the council. He had missed only one night in seven years. He hoped all would come out and vote for him, (Applause.)

Mr. John Cliff on coming forward stated that he was a candidate at the request of many ratepayers. Though late in the field
he did not think his chances of election hopeless. He pointed to his five years' service in the town council, during which time he was chairman of the Streets and Bridges Committee, and said if elected he would, as in the past, do his duty fearlessly. He was loudly applauded.

Reeve Herring was next called upon and was received with applause. He had served the town in one capacity or another for twenty-four years—had grown grey in its service, as it were—and now wished to retire. He had never allowed politics to influence him in municipal matters and had always tried to do his duty up and above board. He hoped his successor would do likewise. Referring to the Wardenship he said he now knew why it was that Mr. Wilson had been selected over him. Mr. Wilson had said he had "treated" the councilors well. This explained the whole matter.
He (Mr. H.) being a consistent temperance man, had done no treating. If it was necessary to perambulate the streets at night and treat in the hotels in order to get the Wardenship he did not want it. The speaker resumed this morning at 9 o'clock, in the Court House, before Police Magistrate Curry and the two other magistrates associated

the murder was committed, which, while it covered all the old tracks enabled the fresh tracks to be plainly seen. The were distinctly traced from Mr. Jones' door to the main road running in front of the house. They then followed the road west for a few rods and then took a southerly direction across the fields to West Lake.

When on the ice they separated, one going in a southerly direction. These tracks led directly to Thompson's door, and his boots fit the tracks. The other tracks led in an easterly direction to Louder's house. These tracks were made by boots having half-soles, and the half-sole of one boot was about a quarter of an inch longer than the half-sole of the other boot. These boots belong to George Louder and were found in his father's house. The

the youngest man arrested, is not so strong.
Mr. Low, Q. C., on behalf of the Crown, asked for an adjournment of the investigation until Friday, Jan. 4. The prisoners were remanded till that time. The court room, as on the previous day, was crowded, and public interest in the trial is increasing.

—The donation held in the church on Wednesday evening was very well attended, considering the very short notice it had. The proceeds amounted to $26.45.

—The Yarker band gave us a surprise on Christmas day, which was appreciated by all. They play well, considering the short practice they have had.

PERSONAL.—Peter Walroth gave us a call this week. He is home on a visit... Miss Quigley, from Odessa, is spending a few weeks with Mr. Wartman's family, of this place... J. W. Bell, M. P. gave us a friendly call last week.

—On the first of January we expect a change in the mail routes. We are sorry to part with Abel, as he is a very faithful and efficient carrier, hardly ever failing to bring the mail on time. After that date we will get it from Napanee via Camden East. Mr. T. Glover has been engaged as carrier.

—We have a little church called "The Old Lutheran," and it is owned by the M. E. Church, and once a fortnight we hear the cheerful voice of Rev. S. A. Duprau, proclaiming the truth as it is in Jesus. He has good congregations and a growing interest is clearly discernible. We have had a first-class Sunday School under the able management of Mr. Wm. TEA MEETING.—A very successful tea meeting under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society was held in the C. M. Church here on Christmas evening. The customary repast over, D. W. Allison, Esq., M. P., was called to the chair. After an excellent address by the chairman, an interesting musical and literary programme was gone through, the singing of Miss Huff and Mr. Allen Davis and the recitation by Rev. E. L. Inwood receiving hearty applause. The chief object, however, of the meeting was to raise funds for a new church. It has long been felt that the Methodist friends have needed a new place of worship, and efforts have been made for several years to raise money for that purpose. It was determined this year, if possible, to bring the matter to a definite issue. The meeting was unanimously in favor of a new church being built during the ensuing summer, and that a subscription list for that purpose be opened at once. Rev. M. L. Pearson kindly took this matter in hand, and so successful was he that before the meeting closed the sum of $2,645 was subscribed, in sums ranging from $10 to $500, which sum was subscribed by our worthy chairman.

Though the school was not opened till late in the season yet it reached the number of 76 attendants, and an average over 60. The public school under his control also flourished and was another evidence of his ability and willingness to sacrifice earthly pleasure and recreation for the public good. Oh that this Canada of ours were filled with such noble young men, whose heart was dedicated to God and whose life was devoted in trying to mould the char- acter of the young for God and religion, then would religion "Blossom as the rose and morality flourish as the green bay tree." He lived in the affections of the people irrespec- tive of denomination and will be sadly missed by both pastor and people. Owing to declin- ing health he was obliged to cancel his engage- ment for the year 1884, a circumstance deep- ly regretted by all. On the eve of his de- parture a few of his many friends with the Rev. Mr. Deprau gave him a surprise in the shape of a farewell at his boarding house Mrs. Ham's residence. After the compli- ments of the evening were passed Rev. Mr. Duprau drew from his pocket a parcel and in an able address, expressive of the high es- teem in which he was held by all and of the appreciation of his valuable services (gratu- itously given) in the school, presented Mr. Sprowl (on behalf of his many friends) with a beautiful roll gold watch guard, a beau- tiful gold locket and a solid gold breast- pin. The present and presentation was a fitting tribute to appreciated worth. Mr. Sprowl's reply showed clearly that the sur- prise was too great for his emotions, but it was very suitable—"disowned the right to reward in the discharge of moral duty." When all were seated the greatest surprise of all was given. Mr. Thos. Close who had taken a back seat now advanced and placed a parcel on the table before Mr. Sprowl, who proceeded to open it and lo! a beau- tiful silver cake basket was exposed to view, which he presented with a suitable address to the rev. gentleman and his lady, which was duly acknowledged in a feeling reply. The ceremony being ended all proceeded to their homes each one carrying with him memories long to be cherished in their hearts. The feelings thus engendered be- tween all concerned present and absent will ever be a source of pleasure to them. May success crown the efforts of our pastor and teacher all through subsequent life is the heartfelt wish of their friends in this locality.

[Correspondence of THE EXPRESS.]

—I have not noticed Roblin represented regularly in your valuable paper and this I consider a burning shame, especially when I see such able correspondents sending notes to the smaller papers of your town. You doubt- less see now, Mr. Editor, how much you have lost in times past by not looking out for correspondents. You might have received "for better or worse" the celebrated "Lady of the Lake" or the equally noted Roderick Dhu, but as they are already secured you will, like the poor man we read about, have to be satisfied with the crumbs that are left.

—Although the fact is not generally known, Roblin is a great place, and number among its inhabitants some very noted per- sons. This latter fact was obvious to the most casual observer who attended the Xmas tree entertainment here.

—There was an oyster supper in the M. E. Church here on Tuesday night of last week. P. W. Dafoe, Esq., Reeve of Rich- mond, filled the chair with his usual ability. The oysters, the principal feature, were ex- cellent. The programme was not so good, although Mr. Nixon's reading, "Pat's intro- duction to Master Bruin," was a very super- ior piece. Rev. Mr. Ferguson gave an ad- mirable address, but as Grand Curiosity was present we refer you to his correspondence for a summary.

—The electors of this school section made, we think, a good choice when they elected Mr. Nixon as school trustee for the coming three years. Miss Detlor will probably be re-engaged as teacher for 1884. We think the trustees made a mistake in leaving the engagement of a teacher till after the annual school meeting. They may, as in this case, get a good teacher, but the good teachers are usually engaged before that time.

—Rev. Inwood was unable, owing to ill- ness, to fulfill his appointment here on Sun- day evening. We trust he may be speedily restored to his usual health. In the absence of Rev. Inwood, Mr. Denison led a prayer- meeting.

—Mr. George McBride, late teacher at Davis' Corners, started on Monday last for Brighton, where he will spend the winter taking orders for fruit and ornamental shade trees. We wish him success.

—Mr. Brennan, of Tyendinaga, started on Monday last for a short trip to the west. "As we journey through life let us live by tht way."

—Woods Bros' are rushing the shingle business these days. On Saturday they cut 17 m. They make an A No 1 article.

—Municipal politics don't seem to excite the natives of Roblin to anything like the average state. Since our popular Reeve has signified his intentions of retiring from the field we have little to gain, no matter which of the rival candidates is successful. Some persons are trying to introduce poli- tics into the election. It is to be hoped that the intelligent electors of Richmond will see the folly of this and put their foot down on it at once.

THE REEVESHIP.—Dr. Kennedy is again in the field for election to the above-named office. He has served the municipality of Bath with great ability during the past five years as Reeve, his deliberations in the County Council have stamped him as a man of good executive ability and he has a host of friends on both sides of politics. His re-election is certain, notwithstanding the efforts being put forth by a few fossil Tories for his defeat. The electors of Bath are not the men to discard a gentleman of Dr. Kennedy's ability, especially when no charge of corruption or mismanagement have even been so much as mooted against him. He is without doubt the very best representative we could possibly get, and as he has served us faithfully in the past, and is now in a fair way of being rewarded for his services by being made Warden of the county, it would be an everlasting disgrace on our people to permit any man to supplant him at this particular time. We hope our people will look at this matter in its true light, and go to the polls on Monday and give the worthy doctor a "plumper." We have nothing much to say about his opponent, Mr. D. W. Ball. He is a very decent fellow for a small tea party, but would be at sea without a rudder, as a representative of a municipality.

[From another Correspondent.]

THE THEATRE ROWLAND.—For the general information of theatre going people we wish you to publish that the village of Bath is becoming renowned. The Conservative party here is determined not to be beaten in our municipal election, and have resolved, after failing in all their corrupt practices to accomplish their ends, to establish a theater, and prepare by practice to meet their opponents. Feeling somewhat doubtful as to their array of talent, and before erecting a suitable building for the purpose, they have concluded to hold meetings for rehearsal every evening in the store belonging to one of the principal managers. Rip Van Finkle will be the first play on the board. So far as regards the rehearsal the company is "doing splendid" and bids fair to end in success. We witnessed that part when Old engagement of a teacher till after the annual school meeting. They may, as in this case, get a good teacher, but the good teachers are usually engaged before that time.

Some persons are trying to introduce politics into the election. It is to be hoped that the intelligent electors of Richmond will see the folly of this and put their foot down on it at once.

—On Sunday last, after a long battle with that fell destroyer, consumption, death relieved John McCutcheon, aged 26 years, from all his troubles. The deceased was a young man of irreproachable moral character, and we have many reasons to believe this New Year to him is the happiest he ever experienced. Some three years ago Mr. McCutcheon, accompanied by his friend Arthur Kimmert, who has also gone to his reward, went to Colorado, in the hope that a change of climate would check the ravages of the disease, but it was too late and he returned home some time ago to die. Rev. Ferguson of Selby, preached a very eloquent and instructive address from the text, "So teach us to number our days."

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your space, and wishing you a very happy New Year,

"Lost the cough I long did know
Many years I felt its blow,
Without the use of pills or blister,
I cured the same with Down's Elixir.
Thousands of affidavits prove
That it doth man's ills remove,
Coughs and colds and hooping cough
By its power soon are off." 8-4

Christianity and Costly

In Japan, some learned Priests, the rich send their children in inferior garments in order that they may not be ashamed to wear shabby clothes. The rich of course would do a very considerable make note of the fact. Very, very glad to see this rule in Canada in regard to Sunday Schools. Many a child is seen on Sunday so arrayed in silk and feathers, and jewelry to Solomon, in all his glory, was like one of them; many a poor child not go to the same Sunday School or very seldom, simply because they would look too plain and too poor by side with those of the gorged. Many an earnest Sunday School would find, if the honest truth were laid bare, that much of her learning to procure the attendance of children is neutralized by this. How many of the great moral reforms sought to be conferred are thus possibly the world will never see. Many a child of struggling parents spirited to tell that the honest absence is the old hat or the dress, and the mischief goes unpunished. Possibly hundreds of thoughtless in this matter, but succeed in opening their eyes and labor in vain.

May not a word in regard to this may be in season in regard to all ages? It is not merely the child who trips to the Sunday School in fine feathers who excites the rouses the spirit of her companion, the great Lady who sweeps up to the very height of fashion is much greater sinner in this respect, may sweep a good many more sisters down the aisle, not to mention again, than she is in being aware of. Surely our churches, the places for millinery display would be a grand thing if they could at once become general for all and woman to go to church properly. Some who go now would probably stay, but a good many others are seldom seen there now compared to the oftener. One of the most and intelligent Christian women has any remembrance of always rule to go to the house of God plainly clad that her poor neighbors not feel embarrassed to go in. That lady was wise as well as ministers might do a good deal to cause in which they labor to "Temperance-in-dress Sunday."

Montreal's Black Sheep

Montreal appears to have than its share of speculating business during the last few years, or its share of them have been found is simply astonishing to read, for to week, the accounts of the development of new commercial scandals for Montreal. False balance sheets, attested to, fraudulent accounts, been published, and hundreds of dollars of the bank funds have been used in personal speculations by placed to guard the trusts. The chief does not seem confined, means, to one set of officers bank. To give a detailed account all, or nearly all, these "irregular" during the past year or two would a good deal of space, and a good taxing the memory. What is the Have the men placed in such positions been a much less honor of men than formerly, or has there a more efficient system of examination introduced, so that it has become impossible to escape detection do not undertake to answer inquiries. On the face of it the explain, however, that "something done," or confidence in banks officials will soon become entirely ed. Nearly all the mischief, so has recently been laid bare, appears in the speculative turn of mind officials, and their greed for gain than it can be honestly obtained legitimate use of their own property.

Christianity and Costly Raiment.

In Japan, some learned Professor tells us, the rich send their children to school in inferior garments in order that the poor may not be ashamed to come in their shabby clothes. The rich of Christendom would do a very considerate thing to make note of the fact. We would be very, very glad to see this rule observed in Canada in regard to our Sunday Schools. Many a child is sent to church on Sunday so arrayed in silks, and furs, and feathers, and jewelry trinkets, that Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of them; many a poor child does not go to the same Sunday School at all, or very seldom, simply because he or she would look too plain and too common side by side with those of the gorgeous apparel. Many an earnest Sunday School teacher would find, if the honest truth could be laid bare, that much of her labor in trying to procure the attendance of certain children is neutralized by this very cause. How many of the great moral advantages sought to be conferred are thus destroyed possibly the world will never know. Many a child of struggling parents is too spirited to tell that the honest cause of absence is the old hat or the much worn dress, and the mischief goes on unsuspected. Possibly hundreds of parents are thoughtless in this matter. If we can but succeed in opening their eyes we have not labored in vain.

May not a word in regard to costly array be in season in regard to children of all ages? It is not merely the young Miss who trips to the Sunday School in such fine feathers who excites the envy or rouses the spirit of her companions; the great Lady who sweeps up the aisles in the very height of fashion is generally a much greater sinner in this respect. She may sweep a good many more less opulent sisters down the aisle, not to return frequently again, than she in her heart is aware of. Surely our churches are not the places for millinery displays! It would be a grand thing if the custom could at once become general for every man and woman to go to church plainly clad. Some who go now would probably then stay, but a good many others whose faces are seldom seen there now could go much the oftener. One of the most honored and intelligent Christian women the writer has any remembrance of always made it a rule to go to the house of worship so plainly clad that her poor neighbors did not feel embarrassed to go in company. That lady was wise as well as rich. Our ministers might do a good thing for the cause in which they labor to set apart a "Temperance-in-dress Sunday."

AMONG THE INEBRIATES.

Life in an Establishment for the Cure of the Alcohol and Opium Habits.

Close to the shore of the bay at Fort Hamilton is a large cheerful-looking building that attracts the attention of most persons coming in by the ocean steamer. It is the Inebriates' Home. The system of cure practised by Dr. Blanchard, the superintendent, was commended yesterday by a well-known New York artist who had just been discharged as cured.

"I was taken up there," he said, "greatly against my will, and more closely resembling a lunatic than a man on an ordinary spree. I was allowed to get over my drunkenness, and then found that the place was more like a hotel than an asylum. The prices paid by the inmates range from $5 to $50 week, and some, under peculiar circumstances, are treated for nothing. Of course the accommodations vary with the price paid, but the treatment of each inmate is in accordance with the condition of the subject. You would be amazed if I should tell you the names of some of the persons who are there now. Lawyers, doctors, merchants, artists, and literary men greet each other periodically, and regret that they cannot enliven the occasion with a social glass. Liquor is not altogether denied, however, and every man, while he needs it, gets a dram of whiskey and lime water at stated hours.

"There are several clergymen of various denominations in the Home, and their craving for liquor is as great as that of any one. When a man first goes in nothing drinkable except water is ordinarily left within in his reach. Alcohol, bay rum, cologne, Florida water, anything that will burn his throat is acceptable to him. His razors, and pocket knife, and anything with which he might injure himself are removed. Opium eaters and men who have been treating themselves to hypodermic injections—and the name of the latter class is legion—are at once deprived of opium, and their sufferings are severe. It often takes six months before they get permanent relief.

"At meal hours colored waiters bring around bills of fare, and the guests are asked to make their selection. Many of them have not much appetite, and it is a well-worn joke to hand back the bill of fare and ask for a wine list. Despite all efforts to prevent them, some of the inmates occasionally get out and come back very drunk. For the first week they are watched day and night, but after that the vigilance is somewhat relaxed, and those who are foolish enough to do so sometimes escape."

The Highland Congregation Committee of Chicago have requested of the Rev. Dr. Campbell, of Collingwood, Ont., that

Montreal's Black Sheen.

Montreal appears to have had more than its share of speculating bank officials during the last few years, or more than its share of them have been found out. It is simply astonishing to read, from week to week, the accounts of the developments of new commercial scandals from Montreal. False balance sheets have been attested to, fraudulent accounts have been published, and hundreds of thousands of dollars of the bank funds have been used in personal speculations by the men placed to guard the trusts. The mischief does not seem confined, by any means, to one set of officers or to one bank. To give a detailed account of all, or nearly all, these "irregularities" during the past year or two would require a good deal of space, and a good deal of taxing the memory. What is the matter? Have the men placed in such trustworthy positions been a much less honorable class of men than formerly, or has there been a more efficient system of examination introduced, so that it has become nearly impossible to escape detection? We do not undertake to answer these enquiries. On the face of it the evidence is plain, however, that "something must be done," or confidence in banks or bank officials will soon become entirely destroyed. Nearly all the mischief, so far as it has recently been laid bare, appears to be in the speculative turn of mind of the officials, and their greed for gain, faster than it can be honestly obtained by the legitimate use of their own property.

College Statistics.

Some one in the United States has been taking a good deal of pains to ascertain the professional destination of the alumni of fifty-eight colleges during the last half century. There were 38,054 in all, and in these 3,577 turned out doctors, and another 6,105 lawyers, while 9,991 were clergymen. According to the above reckoning the preachers were in a majority over the lawyers and doctors put together, and there seems to be an eternal fitness about some such arrangement, for fully so large a number of ministers as that would be required to pull the other two classes safely through, as things have gone—in the United States.

Can any one tell us how figures stand in regard to the alumni of the colleges in Canada? We do not know; but it is evident that the number of lawyers and doctors turned loose on society at the end of each collegiate year is something dread-

The Highland Congregation Committee of Chicago have requested of the Rev. Dr. Campbell, of Collingwood, Ont., that he accept an invitation from that body to repair to Chicago for the purpose of establishing a Gaelic congregation there.

John G. Saxe, the humorous poet, is growing gradually weaker at his home in Brooklyn. He suffers from cerebro spinal meningitis, complicated with partial paralysis induced by being buried under a railroad train in an accident on the Pan Handle road years ago. It is not probable that the once brilliant man will survive this winter.

What is defeat? Nothing but education; nothing but the first step to something better.

Plain Truths!

The blood is the foundation of life, it circulates through every part of the body and unless it is pure and rich, good health is impossible, if disease has entered the system the only sure and quick way to drive it out is to purify and enrich the blood.

These simple facts are well known and the highest medical authorities agree that nothing but iron will restore the blood to its natural condition; and also that all the Iron preparations hitherto made blacken the teeth, cause headache, and are otherwise injurious.

SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS will thoroughly and quickly assimilate with the blood, purifying and strengthening it and thus drive disease from any part of the system, and it will not blacken the teeth cause headache or constipation and is positively not injurious.

St. Johnsbury, Vermont Oct. 31st 1882.

For six years I have been a great sufferer from blood disease, dyspepsia and constipation, and became so debilitated that I could not retain anything on my stomach, in fact life had almost become a burden, and when hope had almost left me, I was induced to give SULPHUR AND IRON BITTERS a trial. I am now taking the third bottle and have not felt so well in six years as I do at present.

Important to Ruptured Persons.

The Excelsior Rupture treatment was introduced to the American people several years ago in such a manner as to completely secure the confidence of the whole nation.
The mode of introduction was by furnishing the remedy to those afflicted with Hernia in any of its various forms and collecting no pay until a permanent cure was effected. In this way the treatment gained a world-wide reputation on its own merits, never failing to cure any reducible Hernia. The Company has at the solicitation of thousands placed the remedy on sale by all druggists, both wholesale and retail, in the United States, Canada and England. In this way urge all those suffering from Dizziness, Costiveness or Depression of Spirits, to give it a trial, as I have been completely cured with two bottles. I never enjoyed my

Gentlemen,—I am forty years of age, and have been afflicted for the past ten years with Catarrh. I was recommended to try your Fountain of Health, which I am still using, and, although not perfectly cured, I am so much improved that I heartily recommend it any one suffering from the same disease. While taking it for the above disease, a severe pain, which I had in my side, has entirely left me.

Kidney Disease.

Dear Sirs,—I take pleasure in testifying to the benefits I have received from the use of your Fountain of Health. For over nine years I have suffered from disease of the Kidneys, having a severe pain in the back a great deal of the time and a tenderness of the eye balls. No remedies that I have ever tried, and I have used no end of them, gave me relief, except your Fountain of Health, which has made me feel good. I have used two of your dollar bottles.

Yours sincerely,

AMANDA FLUCH'S MURDERER.

First Knocked Down and Then Carried to a Tree and Hanged.

The Grand Jury of Middlesex county, New Jersey, in session at New Brunswick recently, presented an indictment for murder against John Koop, the self-confessed murderer of Amanda Fluch of Quakertown, Pa., otherwise known as Fannie Duhnam. Koop's confession to Chief of Police Fourat and the Philadelphia detectives included many details of the crime.

"The girl accused me of deceiving her while I was in Quakertown, in December, 1882," he said, "and insisted that I should marry her. I refused, and after I went away she wrote to me several times, repeating the request. I finally answered one of her letters while I was in Perth Amboy, and invited her to come. We remained that night at the hotel where I was stopping, and the next morning about 9 o'clock I invited her to take a walk with me in the woods. She walked alongside me, and asked me once or twice if I expected to marry her. She said and would make me a good wife, but I said 'No.' I made a proposal to her which she rejected, and I then struck her on the back of the neck with my fist, and she fell on her face, the blood running out of her nose and mouth. I wiped it away with my handkerchief, which was thus stained, and I threw it away."

Koop then paused, and evidently desired to stop there or repeat his previous declaration that he had left the woman where she fell, but the Chief of Police said:

"Tell us the whole truth. It is the best thing to do, because I suppose you know your handkerchief, with its initials on it, was found."

"After she fell down on her face," Koop continued, she turned over and looking me in the eyes said; "Oh, John, don't do it." I didn't mind that, but took the rope from round my waist and tied it around her throat. Then I lifted her up on her feet. Some of the blood got on my coat sleeve and I didn't like it. I carried and pushed her along a few feet until she stood under the branches of a tree. I threw one end of the rope over a branch. Then I hoisted her up with the rope and held her there until she died. It took about ten minutes. After tying the rope so it would look like a suicide I crawled out through the underbush to a back road and went back to the brickyard.

"I remained around Perth Amboy until last September, when the body was found. Then I went to Quakertown. I began drinking hard last Monday week and kept it up until Friday because I felt

MISCELLANEOUS.

No, nobody makes a liar; but everybody feels kindlier to the liar who says, "How well you are looking!" than the honest truth-teller who exclaims, "Why! how awfully you're looking!"

What are the ladies to do about their silks in the future? The visible supply is falling off from year to year. In China the insect ravages among the silk worms have been so great that not one half as much of the raw material is now produced as a few years ago, and the decrease continues to an alarming extent. The same trouble exists elsewhere among the silk-worms, but not yet to such a serious extent. Many of the beautiful woollen fabrics of to-day are capital substitutes for silk, being neat and comfortable, and there need be but little fear of any scarcity of the supply of the raw material. The fashion of wearing fine wool instead of silk fabrics should be encouraged, for more reasons than one.

A rich Scottish widow has been lately doing a very sensible thing. Mr. John Elder was a very successful Glasgow ship builder, and, dying, he left a very handsome sum at his wife's disposal. Instead of spending all her spare means on an elaborate monument over his grave, or in some public square, she has arranged to hand over to the Senate of Glasgow University the munificent sum of $62,500 for the purpose of endowing a chair of naval architecture. Probably the whole world may reap some advantages from a wise bequest of this kind. The endowment of one or more chairs in practical science would probably do more good in Canada just now than expending a similar amount for some other chair in theology.

What an amount of bloodshed and murder has come out of that terrible Phoenix Park business. Nine human lives, at least, have been sacrificed, and it is to be feared that the end is not even yet. The cry for blood still is raised, and there is no concealing the fact that as each human victim is offered up, there is a great deal of evident satisfaction on one side or the other. The whole history of that bloody Dublin plot, and its results, will yet be written, but, it will never be a creditable page in the history of civilization and human progress. It sounds more like the dark ages, or the dark places of the earth in the present age, than like anything we might expect in a Christian country in the nineteenth century.

Amanda Flinch was found at McCormick's Hotel. She is a stout German girl, about twenty-four years old. She said she had not seen Koop in eighteen months, that she once lived with him at Quakertown, and that he had told her before he left her that he had a good deal of trouble on his mind. What that trouble was Koop never told her. She said she had never before been ten miles from home in her life, and had never visited Perth Amboy. Her stay in New Brunswick will last until she has identified Koop and has sworn to her companionship with him. Some important facts may then come out, as it is thought that she knows whether Koop's wife came to this country to meet him at Perth Amboy, and when such meeting, if there was one, occurred.

Not alone has it been proved that the body found in the woods was not that of Amanda Fluch, but it has been learned positively that Fannie Dunham also is alive and well. She will go to New Brunswick. She is the woman who was arraigned before Justice Garret in Bath, N. H., on June 1, 1891.

O'Donnell was duly hanged on Monday morning for the "removal" of Carey. He was sensible enough not to make any speech from the gallows. Poor fellow, there will be enough said about his case anyway. Few men more richly deserved hanging, and it is well that the Government did not listen to the cry raised for any respite of the sentence. Though O'Donnell and his admirers gloried in the fact of his shooting Carey he did not hesitate to save his neck by pleading that the shooting was only in self-defence and not therefore an act of vengeance against an informer. Of course he did not expect that any one would believe that this was the real cause of his bloody act, he did not want people to believe that; it was merely a technical plea, but it did not answer its purpose. It is now in order to hear another outburst about "the bloody Saxon" from certain quarters. But nowhere can more blood thirsty men be found than in these same quarters.

Some important facts may then come out, as it is thought that she knows whether Koop's wife came to this country to meet him at Perth Amboy, and when such meeting, if there was one, occurred.

Last May Miss Fluch was married to Aaron Wenzel, an hostler. She has a boy baby.

Not alone has it been proved that the body found in the woods was not that of Amanda Fluch, but it has been learned positively that Fannie Dunham also is alive and well. She will go to New Brunswick. She is the woman who was arraigned before Justice Garretson in Perth Amboy, on June 4, on a charge of intoxication. She left Perth Amboy on the following day. The only theory now held by those who think Koop's confession was based on truth, is that his wife came to this country to meet him in Perth Amboy and that it was her body which was found in the woods.

people so long lived! What is to prevent them? They have a good bracing climate, they certainly and not over-crowded, and there must be a wonderful immunity from doctors. What else is needed? In Sweden a medical student has to undergo ten years stuffing and study before he can become an M.D. Of course, under such a restriction, doctors ought to be pretty scarce and they ought to know a good deal before they are let at large. In Norway seven years are required, and in nearly all the rest of Europe five. In France, England and Canada the more reckless system prevails of only four years. In the United States the time seems to vary from three years to three months, according to the "college" and the amount paid. The average American "doctor" may be set down as a horrid example for the profession; but in spite of all this there are some medical men of splendid scientific attainments in the United States.

A Curious Shooting Case.

An inquest was opened at Penrith recently upon the body of Anthony Hodwin, 13 years of age, who died under remarkable circumstances. The deceased, who was a farmer's son, attended Penrith statute fair on the 18th inst., and in the afternoon, while watching some merry-go-rounds in the street, he suddenly fell, and was carried to the house of his uncle, where he died within the course of an hour from internal bleeding. According to the opinion of three medical men who examined him, no inquest was deemed necessary, and the body was buried. After the funeral, however, the aunt of the deceased, while brushing his clothes, found blood stains upon them and a hole near the stains, and gradually the suspicion gained ground that the young lad had been shot. An order was obtained for the exhumation of the body, and recently evidence was given that the deceased when he fell was standing near a rifle gallery. A man went up to the gallery the worse for drink and took hold of a breechloading rifle, but the attendant took it from him. He picked up another rifle, and it went off in his hands. The deceased was seen to fall immediately afterward, and the post-mortem examination now showed that he had died from the effects of a wound inflicted by a cylindrical bullet a quarter of an inch in diameter, which was found behind the lining of the abdomen.—St. James' Gazette.

Strange Bible Facts.

The learned Prince of Granada, heir to the Spanish throne, imprisoned by order of the Crown, for fear he should aspire to the throne, was kept in solitary confinement in the old prison at the Place of Skulls, Madrid. After thirty-three years in this living tomb, death came to his release, and the following remarkable researches taken from the Bible, and marked with an old nail on the rough walls of his cell, told how the brain sought employment through the weary years.

In the Bible the word Lord is found
1,853 times; the word Jehovah 6,855
times, and the word Reverend but once,
and that in the 9th verse of the cxviii
Psalm. The 8th verse of the cxviii
Psalm is the middle verse of the Bible.
The 9th verse of the viiiith chapter of Esther is the longest verse; 35th verse, xith chapter of St. John is the shortest.
In the cviiith Psalm four verses are alike, the 8th, 15th, 21st and 31st. Each verse of the cxxxvith Psalm ends alike.
No names or words with more than six syllables are found in the Bible. The xxxviiith chapter of Isaiah and xith chapter of 2nd Kings are alike. The word Girl occurs but once in the Bible, and that in the 3rd verse and iird chapter of Joel. There are found in both books of the Bible, 3,586,483 letters, 773,693 words, 31,373 verses, 1,189 chapters and 66 books. The xxvith chapter of the

to read. The most beautiful chapter in the Bible is the xxiind Psalm. The four most inspiring promises are John

nothing for popularity, is a superb lin-

One of the new improvements of science is begining to be introduced to good practical advantage every where. In Switzerland some of the railway companies now cover a portion of their carriages with a phosphorescent preparation which makes them luminous and visible at night. If the plan is not too expensive, it ought to be tried in connection with our railways in Canada. Here is a good opening for scientific men with an inventive turn of the mind. The man who will supply a cheap and effective luminous paint may make great wealth for himself and save many accidents among the people.

The schooner Mary Ann Hulbert recently went down in a gale near St. Ignace Island, Lake Superior. There were twenty persons on board at the time, all of whom were drowned. She was in tow of the Kincardine, but no help could be given.

The Duchess of Edinburgh is said to be the best talker in the English royal family; she is very strong-willed, is the only person who dares to oppose Victoria, or who ever said "I won't" to her; cares nothing for popularity, is a superb linguist, is very plain, is at the root of her husband's quarrel with the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, whose heir he is, and does herself, and makes her husband do, pretty much as she pleases.

Another royal glove has been preserved in Henry VIII.'s "hawkes glove," in which, apparently, a goodly number of "hawkes" could find a comfortable resting-place.

Lord Coleridge is evidently a wiser man than a good many of his American admirers took him to be. He spent a few weeks in the United States and the general expectation seemed to be that as soon as he reached home he would set himself to writing a book all about the country. A good many distinguished Englishmen have done so, with just about as limited means of information. The learned Chief Justice, however, states that he does not intend to do any thing of the kind, simply because he did not learn enough about the fifty millions of sovereign people to form an intelligible opinion. He has had enough judicial experience about forming opinions to be aware that some considerable knowledge of the subject is a prime necessity. What Lord Coleridge did not find out about the people of United States would fill a very large book. He does not even intend to lecture about the country. No wonder such a man is honored, at home and abroad.

LIFE IN LONDON.

scenes In the Seven Dials—Roughs on the Rampage—A Fight with the Police.

She was tall, slender and pretty. She gazed at a kind-looking young man with indescribable love. His left arm supported her. "Ain't she a brazen-faced lass?" said a woman in the crowd, "to turn her lover upside down in company with those 'ere 'amorous eyes?"

This remark was lost on the lass, who still continued to stare at her companion with a gaze of admiration, scrutiny, and anguish. He was speaking to her.

"I'll blow your brains out!" exclaimed an invisible squeaky voice. Tzing—boom then a bark. The crowd laughed. The squeaking voice, the unmusical strains and the bark were issuing from an itinerant "Punch and Judy" which had anchored between The Grapes and The Crown, two large and popular saloons occupying two of the seven sides of the well-known Seven Dials.

It was on Saturday evening. The place swarmed with people. Respectable workmer and forbidding-looking ruffians, steady women, ribald hussies, inebriated guardsmen and blue-ribboned regulars, elbowed each other. It was a startling carnival, a show of the most melancholy aspects of the lowest orders, of their good qualities, and of their unbounded depravities. Suddenly there was a rush. Down came the little theatre, Toby, and all the poor paraphernalia of the play. To crown all, the gas set fire to the curtains. There was a cry of terror echoed by the desperate yell of the stage manager crushed under his burning house. The roughs, however, pursued their advantage. They placed themselves behind each other and made a telling charge. The pavements and gutters were strewn with bonnets, hats, broken jars, and damaged baskets. The tenderest couples were forcibly severed. A few innocents called for the police. This satisfied the miscreants that the road was clear and that they could follow up their operations. A piercing scream was heard. The companion of the strange lass was floored, and was being kicked like a dead cur. The poor girl stood unprotected among the wildest villains in the world—a crowd of thieves, ticket-of-leave men, and impenitents of all sorts, such as can only be encountered in those latitudes. Then something strange occurred. She could have tried to run away, or come to the rescue of her friend, but, after her agonizing cry of despair on being torn from him, she had remained nailed to the spot. An unhealthy, rickety villain seized her from behind, but went no further. "Ye drain creeper," said an unassuming citizen in artisan's clothes. "Ye let go, or by 'eavens——" pumped out by the effort, they were surrounded by the miscreants who were not slow at realizing the superiority of their position. Like one man they fell on the blue coats. A more desperate encounter could not have been witnessed. The officials drew their truncheons, but the ruffians picked up stones. Both parties let out with merciless impulse. There were only four policemen. They would eventually have been cut to pieces by the natives if more men had not come to their rescue. As it was, two of them were taken to the hospital, and will probably be disabled for life.

The arrival of the reserve of constables gave the victory to the peelers, but they came too late to be of much service to the valiant champion of the blind girl, for when the constables reached Moulmouth court he was found half murdered on the ground.

This is a picture from life drawn from Seven Dials, planned and built for the wealthiest families of the city under Charles II,—London Correspondent New York Sun.

Notes About Animals.

We propose here to consider some cases in which animals have seemed to reason. The importance of the subject will be recognized if we remember Darwin's admission that, had no organic being except man possessed any mental power, or if man's power had been of a wholly different nature from those of the lower animals, we should never have been able to convince ourselves that our high faculties had been gradually developed. "In Central Park, one very hot day, my attention," writes Mr. James J. Furniss, of New York, "was drawn to the conduct of an elephant which had been placed in an inclosure in the open air. On the ground was a large heap of newly-mown grass, which the sagacious animal was taking up by the trunkful and laying carefully upon his sun-heated back. He continued the operation until his back was completely thatched, when he remained quiet, apparently enjoying the result of his ingenuity. It seems to me that instinct should have prompted the elephant to eat the grass and that it was reason which caused him to use it for the purpose of diminishing the effect of the sun's rays."

"I may mention a case," says the writer, "of a kitten about half grown having mental reflection of some sort. I was sitting in one of the rooms at a house where I was stopping in Somersetshire, and hearing a knock at the front door was told not to heed it, as it was only this kitten asking admittance. Not believing it, I watched for myself, and very soon saw this kitten jump on to the door, hang by one leg, and put the other fore paw right through the knocker and rap-

assuming citizen in artisan's clothes. "Ye

The mediator did not look much of a bruiser. His challenge was accepted by the scrofulous villian. He was going to kiss his unfortunate victim, who was defending herself as awkwardly as possible,
when there was are iron grip on his hand.
There was hardly any scuffle. The bully tried to free his hand. He might as well have tried to pull it from the grip of a vise.

There was the ground, and the brawler fell to the pavement. His hand had been crushed as effectually as though a wagon-load of stones had passed over it.
"Next time," said Goliath, "ye are stretched [sent to penal servitude], my lad, maybe ye will kerse me, for I doubt whether ye will be 'hable by 'ard labor to display yer hackknwledgment of the guvner's ospitality, but in future ye will perhaps respect a poor blind girl."

Alas, it was true! The pretty innocent lass, with curious looks, sparkling with poignant longing, was totally blind.
She could not see whether she was loved,
and she thought nobody could see how much she loved. Hence her perplexing stare when on the arm of her friend. Her gallant protector had discovered her misfortune. He was not, however, to be left in quiet possession of his triumph. Indeed, Seven Dials would soon lose its right to fame if such small skirmishes could settle its spirited community.

The affray had drawn us from the lieving it, I watched for myself, and very soon saw this kitten jump on to the door, shaped one, fixed in the centre of the door half way up; the top part of the door was glazed. I saw this performance dozens of times afterward, and often used to put the kitten outside to see it done.

It was never known to knock when any one stood in the garden, but if one went indoors and shut it out outside, in a few minutes came the usual knock. A sister kitten to this one was never known to knock, but sat on the doorstep and entered when the door was opened, and in nine cases out of ten the knock was successful. The kitten was never taught in any way; it would knock at both front and back door."

"Many years ago," says the lady who narrated the tale, "my husband had his portrait taken by T. Philips, Sen., R. A., and subsequently went to India, leaving the portrait to be finished and framed.
When it was sent home, about two years after it was taken, it was placed on the floor against the sofa, preparatory to being hung on the wall. We had then a very handsome large black-and-tan setter, which was a great pet in the house. As soon as the dog came into the room he recognized his master, though he had not seen him for two years, and went up to the picture and licked his face. When this anecdote was told to Philips he said it was the highest compliment that had ever been paid to him."—Nature Studies.

Little Earl street on a Saturday night is one of the most bustling lanes that imagination can conceive. The sides of the thoroughfare are occupied by an unbroken line of trucks loaded with cheap wares. The footpath is an interminable row of small shops, carrying on commerce at equally low figures. The screams of the coster-mongers, and traders competing for public favor, the blinding and whistling gas, the unsavory and hostile fumes issuing from decayed vegetables, strongly-salted fish, second-hand clothes, seasoned food, inexpensive boots, and rancid cheeses, the unmusical cries of the women, their hevelled hair, their abbreviated garments, and the barefooted and ragged children, happier than the kings, create an unde-scribable saturnalia.

At the top of the street, on the left-hand side going toward the Grapes, there is a sinister site named Moulmouth court. It has a narrow, low, and dark egress on Little Earl street. "Ye bloody mutilator," said an ugly man to the artisan. "I tell ye this: Ye won't disfigure hanother gentleman in yer days."

This was the signal for a murderous assault on the man by two or three score of desperadoes. In a minute they had run their prey into the dark ally. For all that, the chase was not over. The game was not a hare, but a turkey cock. Circumstances were favorable to pluck and steel, and he had both. The place was narrow, and thus he had only to deal wltah a minority of his assailants at a time. When I last saw him he was hitting like a semi-god.

"Kick 'is brains out or drain 'im, can't ye," said an adviser. "Go it, my pigeons."

But here the pigeons were interrupted. The police, who had been quelling an-other brush, for Seven Dials gives them little leisure, were now turning their attention to the new battle-field. There were not many of them, but they were stout and willing. They ran through the first ranks of the rioters, but being

Word comes from Kingston that Dr. Wilson has been dismissed from his responsible position in the Church of England there, because of his active sympathy and participation in the work of the Salvation Army. The Bishop who approves of the dismissal, gives cheerful testimony to the Christian zeal and moral worth of the dismissed clergyman. That he is an earnest Christian worker no one seems to doubt, but his zeal for the good of others caused him to go beyond the bounds of ecclesiastical propriety, and probably he was not in as good subjection to the higher powers in the Church as he should have been.

Word comes that another honored Minister of the same church in the same city, has just had an active hand in a veritable "tea fight" in aid of the church funds, where the "physical demonstrations" were such as to leave even the Salvation Army demonstrations a long way behind. The two matters, probably, are occupying the attention of Bishop Lewis about the same time. What the outside world will be most curious to know is whether the conduct of Rev. Dr. Wilson or Rev. W. Carey, commends itself most to the approval of the Bishop. The Worldings may come to one conclusion and the Churchmen to another. However the Bishop ought to be the best judge in regard to the important matter of orthodoxy.

A Strange Drink.

There is a story of how a man lost a wager in Pueblo, Colorado. Stepping into a large liquor shop he offered to bet ten to one that he could be blindfolded, tell the name of any liquor or wine in the house, or any mixture of liquors by the taste and smell. All went well with him at first. He named all the celebrated brands correctly. Then they handed him a glass of water. He tasted, he smelt, he tasted and smelt again, and at last, completely nonplussed, he gave it up. "Well, boys, he said, "you have got me. It seems to me as if, years ago, I struck something of the kind in the States, but it was so long ago that I have entirely forgotten it."

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT ELECTED.

On Thursday of last week Sir R. J. Cartwright was elected for South Huron by acclamation, no candidate being found who would venture to oppose him. By this act the people of South Huron have paid a well merited tribute of respect to one of the most self-sacrificing, high minded independent statesmen in Canada, and have restored to the House of Commons one of its most brilliant debaters, especially on financial matters, which it lost through the infamous Gerrymander. The better thinking men of all parties are, we believe, glad that Sir Richard is once more to take part in the counsels of the nation. His commanding abilities and large fund of information qualify him for the highest positions, while his sterling honesty makes his services still more desirable. Sir Richard's name has never, during his whole career, been associated with jobbery. He is a man to be trusted, no matter in what position he is placed.

In these days of enterprising journalism the lives of politicians are very closely scanned. The skeleton in the cupboard of Sir John Macdonald has frequently —The official returns for Algoma show a majority of 114 for Mr. Lyon, the Reform candidate.

—The Standard devoted a column last week to tell its readers that "David Wright Allison must go"—and that even before the House meets. The Tory editor has no doubt be this time learned that he was a little too previous in making the announcement. An application was made last Saturday in Toronto by the petitioner's counsel to have a day fixed for trial without giving the respondent time to enter preliminary objections, but it was overruled, and the trial cannot now take place till after the session. The object of these proceedings is quite plain. The desire of the men who are acting for Mr. Pruyn was to force on the trial and take Mr. Allison by surprise. In this they have been thwarted, and it is highly probable that when the case does come to trial they will again find they have counted without their hosts. David Wright Allison is going—to stay member for Lennox. In a few days he will go—to Ottawa. That's the way he is going.

—Interest in the municipal elections in town has largely centred in the Reeveship. If any one thing more than another was calculated to convince people that it was time to draw the rein on the ex-Warden it was his egotistical speech nomination day. Every word he uttered fairly bristled with the man's self conceit. Why he as much as told the ratepayers he was the only man in the town fit to represent their interests! Mr. Aylsworth's modest remarks afforded a striking contrast to his opponent's bluster, which had its effect on the audience. Anybody who knows the two men must admit that as a practical every day business man and municipal representative, Mr. Aylsworth is, if anything, Mr. Wilson's superior, and the more Mr. Wilson talks about Mr. Aylsworth's learning to creep before trying to walk, he will only keep adding to his opponent's majority. The difference between the two men is that Mr. Aylsworth in the council and out of it acts upon his own judgment, while Mr. Wilson draws his inspiration in municipal matters largely from A. H. Roe. Our belief is that the ratepayers will take the view that Mr. Wilson's services, at the estimate he places upon them, are much too valuable to accept gratuitously and will leave him at home. The town is already under a far much larger debt of gratitude to him than it can ever hope to wipe off.

Cartwright was elected for South Huron by acclamation, no candidate being found who would venture to oppose him. In these days of enterprising journalism the lives of politicians are very closely scanned. The skeleton in the cupboard of Sir John Macdonald has frequently been brought to public view, and only a few weeks ago Sir Charles Tupper was brought face to face with a page of his private history which he no doubt wished was entirely obliterated. But Sir Richard Cartwright's worst enemy can find nothing in his public or private life discreditable to the slightest degree. The worst his opponents can say of him is that he is a "renegade Tory," and they make a great deal of this. According to their idea it is a great crime to desert the Tory ship, even if every plank in it is rotten to the core. But an impartial critic, in writing of Sir Richard, a few days ago, says that he was never a servile follower of the Conservative party. In other than strictly party votes the government did not know where to place him—he maintained an independent course. But even if he was in his youth the high Tory his opponents say he was, it was merely the result of tuition, and it is to his credit that in more mature years, after witnessing the political iniquity of the Conservatives, that he became disgusted and transferred his support to men of strict integrity and to a party of progressive principles. Since his alliance with the Liberal party he has been the subject of abuse of every Tory print and stump speaker, but he has weathered the storm bravely and in a few weeks he will occupy his old position in the House, where his presence will be felt and his name more keenly than before.

THE U. E. LOYALISTS' CENTENNIAL.

[To the Editor of THE EXPRESS.]

SIR,—I have just finished the reading of two letters in the Toronto Mail on the above subject. The writer, Rev. R. S. Forneri, B. D., announces himself as the rector of Adolphustown; by which I presume he means that he sustains that relation to the Episcopalian Church of that township. I wonder if Mr. F. has not learned by this time that there is no ecclesiastical establishment in Canada. He demands special consideration for the proposal he makes, because he is the son of an Italian refugee. While congratulating him upon the heritage into which he has entered, I will venture to suggest, that, having been delivered from beneath the iron heel of an ecclesiastical despotism, and enjoying the protection of a country which will tolerate no state church, and try to recognize no religious monopoly, and especially having come to reside in a county, the vast majority of the inhabitants of which are not of his communion, he and all others should hesitate before he assumes such extensive jurisdiction as his signature indicates. Writing to the papers of this county, he claims the honor of having originated the idea of a celebration; but in his letters to the Mail he thinks it best to make no such claim. Certain it is, however, that before he was appointed to his present parish, a celebration was determined upon, and only the best method of making it successful was under discussion. Of much in Mr. F.'s letter there will be hearty approval. His words are none too flattering, when he speaks of those brave men and the patriotism and self-sacrifice that make their memory so fragrant.

To permit 1884 to pass without a celebration, would, he argues, prove us unmindful of one of the brightest and most important events in our country's history. An appropriate monument should be erected and no place has stronger claims to be the scene of what should be one of the grandest celebrations ever held in Canada than Adolphustown. So say we all.

There will also be great unanimity with much that he has written upon the character of the proposed monument. With him we deplore that the place of their sepulchre hath waste and that the wall is broken down. This reproach must be wiped away.

he was never a servile follower of the Conservative party. In other than strictly party votes the government did not know where to place him—he maintained an independent course. But even if he was in his youth the high Tory his opponents say he was, it was merely the result of tuition, and it is to his credit that in more mature years, after witnessing the political iniquity of the Conservatives, that he became disgusted and transferred his support to men of strict integrity and to a party of progressive principles. Since his alliance with the Liberal party he has been the subject of abuse of every Tory print and stump speaker, but he has weathered the storm bravely and in a few weeks he will occupy his old position in the House, where his presence will be felt and by none more keenly than by Sir John Macdonald. All the malice that has been poured out upon Sir Richard in late years has been inspired by the Chieftain, whose dread of him is only equalled by his hatred. On the floor of the House Sir Richard is more than a match for Sir John and his presence there is scarcely less welcome to the Premier than would be Lucifer himself. To get rid of so formidable an opponent, Sir John, in his infamous Gerrymander, robbed him of his constituency, but the people of Huron have fittingly condemned the act and nobly vindicated Sir Richard by his election on Thursday.

The Reformers of Lennox unite with those of Huron in their rejoicings and look forward to many years of usefulness for the member elect.

—The London Advertiser, in commenting on a paragraph from THE EXPRESS on politics in municipal matters, says:—"It was the Mail itself that advised the carrying on of municipal contests on party grounds, and after the elections it analyzed the results to show Tory gains. Among others it claimed that Mr. Ed. Meredith being elected as mayor was a proof of the Tory proclivities in London. This year both candidates for mayor of this city are Reformers, and if we were as silly as the Mail we would claim that this is because the Tories dare not run a man. But we feel a good deal of satisfaction in reflecting that we are not so silly."

—We have no hesitation in advocating the cause of ex-Coun. Cliff for the Deputy Reeveship, and in doing so we cannot be accused of introducing politics into the contest. Mr. Cliff is a dyed-in-the-wool Tory, but we believe him to be a straightforward honest man. He has not at the dictation of party condoned robbery of the municipal treasury, nor has he approved the vilest of blasphemy. These reasons alone would influence us in Mr. Cliff's favour, but added to them the knowledge that he is a much more practical and useful man in the council than Mr. Carscallen, convince us he is the right man for the position, and we trust he will be elected.

ish, a celebration was determined upon, and only the best method of making it successful was under discussion. Of much in Mr. F's. letter there will be hearty approval. His words are none too flattering, when he speaks of those brave men and the patriotism and self-sacrifice that make their memory so fragrant.

To permit 1884 to pass without a celebration, would, he argues, prove us unmindful of one of the brightest and most important events in our country's history. An appropriate monument should be erected and no place has stronger claims to be the scene of what should be one of the grandest celebrations ever held in Canada than Adolphustown. So say we all.

There will also be great unanimity with much that he has written upon the character of the proposed monument. With him we deplore that the place of their sepulchre lieth waste and that the wall is broken down. This reproach must be wiped away. Very properly are we reminded, however, that to expend our veneration for the illustrious dead upon such a work would be unworthy their successors. "No towering monument of stone or marble upon a pedestal of corresponding magnitude with appropriate inscription." (These are the rev. gentleman's words and they are true and beautiful) can fittingly express our estimate of their noble deeds.

Now had Mr. Forneri concluded his letters when he had written so enthusiastically upon the general question he would doubtless have been hailed by the originators of the movement as a sincere and disinterested helper. But when in the closing sentences to which all previously written is but a mere preface, he comes to furnish us with his opinion as to what said monument should be, he must not wonder if some will suspect that his chief design is to take advantage of the coming celebration in order to carry out a sectarian enterprise.

The writer cannot imagine (although it is evident that he has a very widespread imagination) any motive that would prevent every church helping to carry out his scheme. I regret that he gives us credit for so little regard for the memory of the men who fought for and won the liberties we enjoy in Canada. Were all the U. E. Loyalists Episcopalians? Were the ministers of that church their only religious teachers? Are their successors, their children and grandchildren in connection with it now? Mr. Forneri has records which are as old as 1820. I have records that reach further back than that. They tell of the preaching of the gospel in Adolphustown by the pioneer Methodist preachers as early as 1791. In that year the Rev. Wm. Loece organized the Bay of Quinte Circuit, and in 1818 Mr. Geo. H. Detlor, who is still living, was the Recording Steward. We have heard, our fathers have told us, of the persecution so which they were subjected by those who ought to establish in Canada a system of religious tyranny. But the old U. E. Loyalists would have none of such. Does Mr. Forneri help his plan by the extensive quotation of names from his parish register, which he sends to the Toronto Mail? He does not. And he knew that while the long array might possibly lead those at a distance to suppose that all these families were Episcopalians, that to insert them in his letters they are left out. Transferred as Mr. Forneri has been from Belleville to Adolphustown one will blame him when looking deck of a steamer on the Bay of Quinte the high ridge on which the rectory he should purpose the erection of a cent Episcopalian Church. In it he informs us he "beheld by its side in the early English style, built from the Kingston quarries with a tower on the south-west surmounting battlements", etc., etc. The vision doubtless a most enchanting one, is not, I am satisfied, a Christian Canada that would not rejoice in the erection of just as beautiful a church, energy and liberality of himself and his church can secure. But when the man so indulges his fancy that he imagines he sees all the ministers of other churches who seldom from himself and associates in the ought but the most disrespectful aiding in carrying out his most pious proposal, it will be kind of to startle him out of his dream. On the evening at an entertainment held at Adolphustown Church, which is built out of the material of the first Episcopalian Church ever erected in Canada, 1000 were subscribed to erect a Episcopalian Church next year. This is, however, a denominational memorial and prevent our people from entering into the arrangements for a provincial county celebration and the erection of a monument which will bear no name. Let Mr. Forneri's congregation and do likewise. The men whom their successors, the event to be demanded that the celebration and the monument be such as all good and loyal irrespective of religious distinctions heartily approve and endeavour to. Perhaps the committee to be appointed for the general meeting called for the 1st of January, may decide that no Episcopalian would so worthily perpetuate the name of the U. E. Loyalists as a church. If determined the committee may in the co-operation of the people in this. But the committee will, I am confident

TERRIBLE RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

Twenty-Three Workmen Killed and Ten Wounded.

A painful accident occurred near the Humber, west of Toronto, Wednesday morning on the Great Western division of the Grand Trunk. Full of life, and health and hope forty-three men left the city on the suburban train for their work at the Bolt Works, between High Park and the Humber. Half an hour afterwards many of them lay dead in the ditch, bruised and broken, and terrible to look upon. Nearly all of them were frightfully mangled, some with both legs crushed to a jelly, others with their legs burnt to a cinder, while others had their skulls crushed in, arms off and bodies mangled out of shape. It appears that the suburban train, of which Mr. Carter is the conductor, left the station about nine minutes late, and was going at the usual rate of speed. Just after it had passed the toll-gate Kennedy, the engineer, gave a whistle, and thinking that the line was quite clear, steamed ahead. On the south side of the track there is a heavy growth of trees, which prevented the engineer from seeing very far ahead, and at the terminus of these trees there is a sharp curve and a heavy grade. The sound of the whistle had hardly died away before an engine, attached to which were two cabooses, appeared around the corner, coming towards the dummy at a high rate of speed. Kennedy reversed the engine, but seeing that nothing could avert a collision, he shrieked out a warning and he and the fireman jumped, rolling down the slight embankment. Mr. Carter, who was passing from the first to the second car—there were only two attached to the dummy—heard the cry, and looking out, saw the train within forty yards of him. He yelled out "jump boys," and threw himself forward, and as he did so the trains met. The engine struck the dummy and knocked the boiler clean through the car, crushing the unfortunate passengers in every direction, and pinning many of them to the floor. The impetus was so great that the engine actually mounted the truck of the dummy, which, strange to say, kept the rails, and remained there on a balance. The engineer of the train that ran into the dummy, when he saw that a collision was inevitable, sprang from the engine and escaped with a few slight wounds, but Thomas, the fireman, was not so fortunate. When he saw his companion jump, he leaned over the side of the engine, and as he did so the collision occurred, and he was buried in the ruins, his death being instantaneous. Nearly all of the passengers were employed at the Humber Bolt Works, and they were on their way to work when the collision occurred. With the exception of five or six the whole thirty-seven occupied seats in the front car, and so far as can be at present learned, only one man—his name is supposed to be O'Donohue—escaped from being killed or wounded.

The conductor of the freight train, George Barber, it is said, is to blame for running in without orders. He was promptly put under arrest, awaiting the result of the inquest. The affair has cast a gloom over Toronto as many of the men resided in the city with their families.

THE KILLED.

OBITUARY.

The Late Col. Geo. H. Detlor, Ex-M.P.

Monday morning about 11 o'clock Col. Geo. H. Detlor breathed his last at the residence of his son-in-law, James Perry, Esq. The old gentleman for the past few years has been very infirm, but up to a few months ago he had full possession of his faculties. He was a prominent figure in the Bay District in his time, being a man of ability and of strict integrity. The following sketch of his life written by himself some twenty years ago, which by the kind permission of his relatives we print, affords a much more accurate account of his life's work than any we could write:—

"The following passage by St. John I wish may be taken as the foundation of a funeral sermon in my case. Selected by me in Nov., 1863,—2nd Timothy, 4th Chapter, 7th and 8th verses. G. H. D."

"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course. I have kept the faith. Hence forth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous Judge will give me that day, and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing."

"And the following sketch of my life may be read on the occasion of the funeral services at any time which may suit the minister officiating:—

"The subject of this notice was born at the residence of his Grandfather Detlor, in the township of Fredericksburgh on the 24th day of July, 1794.

"In the year 1802 his father and family removed to the town of York (now city of Toronto) where he was employed as clerk in the Inspector General's office and as book-keeper for a merchant from 1804 until the time of his death which, he met in the defense of his country at the time of the invasion of the Americans in April, 1813.

"His grandfather and mother were members of the first Methodist society which was formed by Philip Embury in the city of New York. In consequence of their loyalty to the British Crown they were compelled to leave the United States. After taking up their residence in Fredericksburgh their house was a constant home for the Methodist preachers, as was likewise the house of his father while living in the town of York. After the close of the war he removed his mother and family to Fredericksburgh, where she owned a farm—himself entering into the mercantile business with the late Hugh C. Thomson, of the town of Kingston. In 1818 he married the second daughter of the late John Roblin, of Adolphustown.

"The partnership with Mr. Thomson was dissolved—both retiring from the mercantile business—Mr. Thomson engaging in printing and publishing and he in farming and milling. In 1829 he re-commenced trading near the present town of Napanee and eventually removed to the (then) village of Napanee.

"In 1836 he was elected to the Provincial Parliament to represent, with the late John S. Cartwright, Esq., the united counties of Lennox and Addington. During the rebellion of 1837-38 his business became deranged to that extent that he again retired therefrom. In the year 1845 he received employment by the District Council in regulating the back assessment of lands; in October, 1847, was appointed to the office of District

Aggett, Thomas Burns, Richard Mulligan, Samuel Bailey, J. Abbey, James Kelly, Alexander Munro.

THE WOUNDED.

W. Fitzgerald, Richard Carruthers, M. Kelly, W. Rogers, Chas. McDonald, James Kelly, Alex. Banks, John Aggett, P. Naughton, John Corrigan, Frank Moncrief, Patrick Carenay, and Matthew Walker are the names of the wounded. The injuries sustained by Michael Kelly, W. Rogers and Alex. Banks are but slight and their recovery certain. The attending physicians could not give a positive opinion of the rest of the patients as their injuries are chiefly the result of inhaling steam. They may or may not recover.

PERSONAL.—Mr. John M. Lyman was home a week during the holidays. Miss Tina Wellington also was home to spend her vacation. She has been re-engaged to conduct the Mill Haven school for '84. Miss Libbie Collins of Bath spent the vacation here as the guest of Miss Wellington. Miss Kate Edgar of Croydon has been engaged to teach in Enterprise school.

TEA-MEETING.—The tea-meeting in the C. M. Church Christmas evening was a grand success. Music was furnished by Miss Lyman, Miss Walker, Miss Wagar, and our Tamworth friends. Recitations were given by Miss Ella Walker, Miss Black and Mr. J. M. Lyman. Speeches by Messrs. Jackson and Pyke of Enterprise and Revs. Faull and Bates of Tamworth. The chair was ably filled by Mr. Caleb Raymond. The proceeds amounted to $100.

to the British Crown they were compelled to leave the United States. After taking up their residence in Fredericksburgh their house was a constant home for the Methodist preachers, as was likewise the house of his father while living in the town of York. After the close of the war he removed his mother and family to Fredericksburgh, where she owned a farm—himself entering into the mercantile business with the late Hugh C. Thomson, of the town of Kingston. In 1818 he married the second daughter of the late John Roblin, of Adolphustown.

"The partnership with Mr. Thomson was dissolved—both retiring from the mercantile business—Mr. Thomson engaging in printing and publishing and he in farming and milling. In 1829 he re-commenced trading near the present town of Napanee and eventually removed to the (then) village of Napanee.

"In 1836 he was elected to the Provincial Parliament to represent, with the late John S. Cartwright, Esq., the united counties of Lennox and Addington. During the rebellion of 1837-38 his business became deranged to that extent that he again retired therefrom. In the year 1845 he received employment by the District Council in regulating the back assessment of lands; in October, 1847, was appointed to the office of District Clerk, and in May, 1848, received his appointment of Appraiser in the Customs Department at the Port of Kingston. The first office he resigned in 1861, the latter he occupied until March, 1872.

HIS RELIGIOUS LIFE.

In October, 1817, he joined the Wesleyan Church under the late Rev. Thos. Madden. In 1818 was appointed Assistant Secretary of the Quarterly Board of the Bay of Quinte Circuit. On the death of the late Rev. D. Dunham, he succeeded him as Secretary and Steward, which office he held down to 1838, at which period he removed temporarily from the Circuit. On returning to Napanee was re-appointed Steward and Class Leader, resigning both in 1848 on removing to Kingston. In 1849 in Kingston he was appointed a Class Leader and on the return of his family to Napanee he resigned that office and was appointed Steward and remained a member of a class in Kingston until the 8th of October, 1865, when he joined the class under Bro. J. Hawley which met after the Sabbath service in Napanee.

"His trust in the merits of the atonement was clear and satisfactory, having an assurance that he had a hope sure and steadfast of an inheritance where the wicked cease from troubling and where the weary be at rest."

The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon, and considering the weather, was very largely attended.

Memorial Service

The funeral sermon of the late Geo. H. De Lor will be delivered in the C. M. Church next Sunday evening by Rev. M. L. Pearson.

MUNICIPAL.—At the nomination for the township council of Tyendinaga yesterday Mr. Hanley, reeve, and Mr. Munro, councillor, were re-elected by acclamation. D. L. Brown, Esq., was also elected councillor by acclamation. We heartily congratulate Mr. Brown, who is brother-in-law to Mr. Allison, M. P. for Lennox, on his election, and trust that in his new position he may faithfully serve the best interests of the people. The contest between the 1st and 2nd deputy-reeveship is between Messrs. Tripp and Nash, and Anderson and West, the last named in both cases being members of the last council.

POLITICAL.—“Whom the gods destroy they first make mad.” Does this apply to the present desperation of the Conservative party? Fairly beaten and completely routed in the late contest in Lennox, do they now hope by some quirk of the law to obtain the seat for the county? To all intelligent outsiders not blinded by the smoke of the fray it has been manifest that the great storm on the day of the election did far greater injury to Mr. Allison than his opponent, and that if the battle had to be fought over again he would be confirmed in his seat as representative of the people by a more decisive majority than he now has.

Railway Accident.

Frank Spink, Wilton Avenue, Toronto, some time ago received a bad injury by an accident on the G. T. R. The severe contusions were quickly healed by the use of Haggard's Yellow Oil.

ONE OF THE MOST FREQUENT RESULTS OF depraved nutrition, caused by indigestion and imperfect assimilation of food, is the unsightly eruptions which disfigure the face of so many people. The blood being poor and deficient in material for repairing and building up the tissues, does not properly nourish the skin, and disagreeable humors manifest themselves, the general health at the same time becoming impaired. Radical and permanent cure results from restoring the digestive apparatus, and vitalizing the circulation, which is effected by Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya, a purely physiological blood-maker and purifier that imparts great freshness of tone and color to the complexion by promoting nutrition.

Highly Agreeable.

One very valuable feature of Dr. Low's Pleasant Worm Syrup is, that it is highly agreeable to take, and all varieties of worms, tape worm included, can be safely expelled by it without recourse to harsh and sickening drugs.

Pimples and Blotches.

Call at T. A. Huffman's and A. W. Grange's drug stores and get a package of McGregor & Parke's Carbolic Cerate. It is composed of Vaseline, Carbolic Acid and Cerate, and has never failed to remove Pimples, Blotches, Ulcerated Sores, Rough Skin. It cures when others fail. Try it.

A Christmas Vigil.

BY ETTA W. PIERCE.

The wild storm shakes the cabin, she hears the breakers roar.

The high tides of December beat on the groaning shore.

Black crouch the sunken ledges, beneath the waters white,

And loud the bar is wailing, at Christmas in the night.

With spectral light the candle flares on the cabin wall;

With spectral gleams the embers to cold gray ashes fall.

The death-watch in the rafter ticks solemnly and loud,

Against the window flutters the white snow like a shroud.

Only the friendly beacon, set in its tower to mark

The rocks and boiling channel, burns red upon the dark.

In drift of yellow tresses she stands a pallid ghost,

And hears the fierce northeaster assail the shrinking coast.

The tears weigh down her lashes—with trembling and affright

She keeps Love's mournful vigil: at Christmas in the night:

God help the souls that travel the awful sea in ships!

Upon the cabin hearth-stone she kneels with clay-cold lips.

While creaks the gusty rafter, and fades the glaring light,

She sobs her sad petition, at Christmas in the night.

"Oh, Babe, who in the manger of far-off Bethlehem lay—

Who came to cure our sorrows, and take our sins away—

Oh, Christ, who walked the waters, and calmed the raging sea—

Oh, dear Lord, born at Christmas, have mercy upon me!

Thou rulest on the billows, as on the steadfast land,

Thou holdest wind and tempest within Thy holy hand.

Secure, thro' storm and darkness, my home-bound voyager keep!

On this, thy blessed birth-night, oh, guide him o'er the deep,

The reefs are sharp and cruel, the surf is strong and white.

My heart with fear is breaking, at Christmas in the night!"

Far to the gray east glimmered the new, the sacred day.

The winds of heaven grew silent, the tempest stole away.

The bright sun smote the cabin, and through its window smiled,

Sweet as a sign of blessing from Bethlehem's holy Child.

And lo! adown the harbor, a white sail gleamed afar!—

At Christmas, in the morning, his ship came o'er the bar written too sentimentally, Nora? Are my words weak and unmanly? Well, for to-night at least they may stand. If the shadow that falls upon me as I write means nothing, if I come back safe and sound to-morrow, your eyes will never rest upon them. And, if it is ordered otherwise, you will read them in the softening shadows of death. And now, my own darling Nora, if it must be, good-night."

Nora dropped the letter with a shuddering cry, and lifted a picture from the desk—a picture so like the original that, meeting the frank blue eyes with their brave trustful smile, she could almost have believed that Arthur had indeed come back from the shadow-world to look upon her once more.

To look upon and find her—how? She laughed aloud, a fierce unnatural laugh, as she thought of the picture his generous fancy had drawn and the reality he would be forced to look upon. In twenty years time he would find her still Nora Bruce, still true to a lover in the shadow-world. So he wrote, and thought; and here she was, in less than two years, burning the words that ashamed and tortured her on the eve of her wedding-day.

Burning them! Ah, no, she had not strength for that! She gathered the papers up and pressed them passionately to her pale lips. She would lock them up, would never look on them again; but see the paper on which Arthur's hand had rested, the words his pen had traced, scorch and shrivel into nothingness within the cruel flames she could not and she would not; there was sacrilege in the very thought.

"Forgive me, Arthur!" she cried wildly. "Oh, my darling, if you could but know!"

Her pretty head fell forward on the desk, on the crushed papers, on the pictured face which after to-night the girl might look upon no more, and for a brief space of time something like a sweet and solemn peace fell over her, a feeling as though she were alone with her dead and held communion with them. Intense pain wrought to frenzy had proved its own anaesthetic, and for a long while she neither feared nor suffered more.

How long this strange trance of peace lasted she could not say; she was roused from it by a slight touch, to find Christine fully dressed beside her, her hand upon her shoulder and a curious mocking smile in her eyes.

"Were you asleep, or had you fainted, Nora?" she asked kindly—Christine from the moment in which she reconciled herself to the engagement had grown wonderfully kind. "Do you know that you have barely left yourself time to dress for dinner?"

Nora, roused to duty and misery once more, thrust the papers and picture into the moment Nora thought that indeed dead, and envied her what that was achingly intense. Christine needed it not, and sudden peace and easy passage from all the heart-breakings of this world she—

"Christine!" the girl cried but the other stirred, and brought her to the reality of the scene. Had been premature; this was not ready the blue eyes were wide and the pale lips parted in a gasp.

Nora knelt beside her, raised her head, and bathed the gray hair with eau-de-Cologne. Gradually her senses came back, her eyes ceased their stony stare, her breath came more freely, and she tried to draw herself up.

"You are better now, Christine," she started at the sound of her voice, and gave a quick look of terror—a most inexplicable look, admitting that her mind still was not clear. "How did you come here?" abruptly.

"How is it you are in this room?" Nora said quietly. "You were well when you left me, Christine, has happened since?"

She grew suddenly more earnest, straight into the other's eyes, she would read her inmost thoughts, then turned away, saying shortly and sullenly—

"I ran too quickly. I felt a little here"—touching her left side, "I remember nothing more."

Nora stared at her, a little incredulously perhaps—the explanation seemed probable. A run across the country set Christine Singleton—Christine would dance from midnight and never turn a hair, who was the fullest tennis-player in all Nettleton, a girl who knew her best could not lie. Yet there was no ghostly look.

"Go down, Nora," she said, and a great gong gave its final clang, and followed almost directly.

"Shall I send Mrs. Bruce?" Nora asked doubtfully. It seemed to leave her thus, and yet she must go.

But Christine negated the entreaty, she said nothing, she trembled so violently all the while that the girl thought she would fall, whether she kept or no. Argument only served to irritate her, and time began to press; with extreme reluctance, Nora went.

It hardly seemed likely that she would make her appearance to the guests but almost before the guests were seated in the great room, and just as Mrs. Bruce was speculating vexedly as to the cause of her daughter's absence, Christine

CHAPTER V.

The days wore on drearily and monotonously, filled with work and excitement for Mrs. Bruce and her daughter, but presenting nothing but one dull blank to the bride-elect. Afterwards she never thought of this as a period of sharp pain; all her senses were mercifully dulled, and, as she told herself again, with a curious thrill of triumph, her heart was dead.

"She bears it beautifully," Mrs. Bruce said to her daughter, in one of the rare intervals that visiting and being visited, shopping and submission to the milliners' and dressmakers' caprices, now allowed them. "I never thought that Nora would have been so docile."

But Christine, much keener-sighted than her mother, shook her blonde head with a very dubious look.

"You are not out of the wood yet, mother," she said sneeringly. "I would not count too much on her placidity if I were you; there is such a thing as a lull before a storm, you know. You may not have a peeress step-daughter after all."

Mrs. Bruce grew suddenly pale, and was absolutely unhappy for the two following days; but nothing came of the spiteful prophecy, nothing had come on the eve of Nora Bruce's wedding-day.

The house was full of guests, and gay with the bustle of preparation; girl-voices rang out in every corridor, silk dresses "swished" and high-heeled shoes pattered continually up and down the stairs; carts of every description stopped perpetually at the door, milliners' girls, confectionery men, florists, jewellers, haunted the house.

Only in one room where the bride-elect sat, white and rigid, by the little brass-bound desk in which all her girlish secrets lay, was any semblance of peace to be found; and here in truth was the fiercest unrest of all.

How long she had sat there she did not know. The sun sank lower and lower, the clock struck six, and the sound aroused her at last. What she had to do must be done quickly. Lord de Gretton's wife must take no souvenir of Arthur Beaupre into her new life. With cold trembling fingers she opened the letters—Arthur's letters—out before her. There were not many in all—half-a-dozen notes sent with flowers and books and music, a few genuine love-letters written on the faded papers, on the pictured face which after to-night the girl might look upon no more, and for a brief space of time something like a sweet and solemn peace fell over her, a feeling as though she were alone with her dead and held communion with them. Intense pain wrought to frenzy had proved its own anaesthetic, and for a long while she neither feared nor suffered more.

How long this strange trance of peace lasted she could not say; she was roused from it by a slight touch, to find Christine fully dressed beside her, her hand upon her shoulder and a curious mocking smile in her eyes.

"Were you asleep, or had you fainted, Nora?" she asked kindly—Christine from the moment in which she reconciled herself to the engagement had grown wonderfully kind. "Do you know that you have barely left yourself time to dress for dinner?"

Nora, roused to duty and misery once more, thrust the papers and picture into the desk—not, she knew, before Christine had seen them and guessed shrewdly what they were; but they did not trouble her. It was her own conscience she feared, and not Christine Singleton.

"I did not know it was so late," Nora answered wearily, pushing the hair out of her heavy eyes, and revealing so tragic a face that her step-sister said sharply—

"You have been crying, child. What will Lord de Gretton say?"

"Lord de Gretton cannot claim any control over my tears until this time to-morrow," Nora answered, while her tremulous fingers tangled the heavy hair they vainly tried to reduce to order.

"Shall I not call your maid?" Christine asked; but Nora shook her head in vehement refusal. The sharp-eyed Frenchwoman was a terror to which she must accustom herself; but for to-night, at least, she would be free.

"Then let me help you," Miss Singleton persisted; "you will dress yourself by midnight at your present rate of progression. Come, Nora; it is for the last time."

And the first, she might have said with equal truth. Many a time and oft, in the old happy days, when Nora was the least-considered person in her father's house, and had no golden future spreading out before her, many a time had she dressed Christine Singleton for ball or picnic, plaited the pale silky hair, laced the cheap pretty dresses, and sent her forth to conquest, looking her very best; but never before had she proffered her services to Nora. The thought flashed across the girl's mind, forcing a ghost of a smile to her pale lips; but she banished it at once, and quietly accepted the offer. Christine would stay, she knew; so it would be an easier thing to have her busy, with hands and eyes alike occupied, than sitting there watching her every movement.

Under her light and skillful touches Nora was quickly dressed and made

It hardly seemed likely that would make her appearance tha but almost before the guests stately fashion into the great room, and just as Mrs. Bruce speculate vexedly as to the cause daughter's absence, Christine entered and took her place, just Nora, as quietly as though nothing happened.

Meeting her step-sister's anxious across the intervening flower barrier, she smiled a strange unable smile. Her eyes had an brightness, her cheeks had such flush as few had seen them with hot glow came and went as she recklessly with her neighbor, who ed her more than once with misonishment and admiration, and to a friend in the course of the that he did not know "that little Singleton" had so much go in.

But her mother noticed that nothing, and drank champagne sort of feverish thirst.

Nora saw little of her throughout the evening, though somehow her movements had a strange fascination. She followed the slender pink-rod as it moved restlessly about the rooms, into and out of the conservatory never staying long in one spot, as by any chance approaching her, hardly listened to Lord de Gretton's murmured chat, or the gentle buzz of conversation that went on around; the perplexed her—was Christine avoiding or not?

If she was, she changed her place at the last moment. As Nora sat in her alone at last, resting her hot head against the sash of the window, and looking with aching wistful eyes at the splendor of the starlight midnight the door opened, and Christine, very weird and ghostlike in her white wrapper, came in.

The house was full of guests, and gay with the bustle of preparation ; girl-voices rang out in every corridor, silk dresses "swished" and high-heeled shoes pattered continually up and down the stairs ; carts of every description stopped perpetually at the door, milliners' girls, confectionery men, florists, jewellers, haunted the house.

Lord de Grecton's wife must take no souvenir of Arthur Beaupre into her new life. With cold trembling fingers she opened the letters—Arthur's letters—out before her. There were not many in all—half-a-dozen notes sent with flowers and books and music, a few genuine love-letters written on board the transport, full of high courage, softened by tenderest pity for the girl he had left behind him, and, last of all, that written on the even of the engagement in which he fell. No wonder that the girl's tears fell thick and fast upon this legacy of love !

"If the fortune of war should go against me, you must not grieve too long," the poor young fellow wrote. "Your love has made me so happy, I could not think that even my death should bring you lasting grief. You will never quite forget me, Nora ; you will hardly choose another love, though in the long life that spreads before you such things would be natural enough. But you have faithful eyes, my darling. I close my own and look once more into their clear gray depths, and, looking, I can fancy they will ever light up for another as they lighted once for me. I think that, if I could come back from the grave twenty years hence, I should find you still Nora Bruce, still true to a lover in the shadowy world.

"Mind, I do not wish this, Nora. It is only an idle fancy, and I hardly think it brings me comfort, selfish as my great love makes me. A life of resignation and patient grief is not the lot for which my bright warm-hearted Nora was born. Be happy in your own way, choose your own walk in life, and know that, if I could pierce the veil, and follow your progress through the world that I have done with, I should be best pleased to see you walking in the sunshine, and only casting back from time to time a soft regretful look to that dark-shadowed past in which I played my part. woman was a terror to which she must accustom herself ; but for to-night, at least, she would be free.

"Then let me help you," Miss Singleton persisted ; "you will dress yourself by midnight at your present rate of progression. Come, Nora ; it is for the last time."

And the first, she might have said with equal truth. Many a time and oft, in the old happy days, when Nora was the least-considered person in her father's house, and had no golden future spreading out before her, many a time had she dressed Cristine Singleton for ball or picnic, plaited the pale silky hair, laced the cheap pretty dresses, and sent her forth to conquest, looking her very best ; but never before had she proffered her services to Nora. The thought flashed across the girl's mind, forcing a ghost of a smile to her pale lips ; but she banished it at once, and quietly accepted the offer. Cristine would stay, she knew ; so it would be an easier thing to have her busy, with hands and eyes alike occupied, than sitting there watching her every movement.

Under her light and skillful touches Nora was quickly dressed and made ready ; and, as she stood before the long glass, fastening the ear-rings in her ears, she thought with a sharp pang, how small a trace the inner anguish she endured had left upon her face, how radiant she looked in the maize-colored silk and soft showers of black lace in which it had pleased Cristine to dress her.

A tap at the door was answered by Cristine ; and Nora thought, but was not sure, that she heard the maid say—

"A letter for Miss Bruce."

Letters had come by fifties and hundreds to her of late ; so naturally she did not attach much importance to this. She was rather surprised however when five, ten minutes passed away, and Cristine did not return—the more so as the dinner-bell now sounded, and Nora saw that she had left her fan and gloves upon the dressing-table.

Her room was at the other end of the long corridor. Nora had to pass it on her way down ; so she took the gloves and fan with her, meaning to leave them with her if she was there, or carry them to the drawing-room if she had gone down. The door stood slightly ajar. She pushed it open carelessly, and, to her horror and amazement, saw Miss Singleton lying in a dead faint on the ground. For a moment she stood staring helplessly, paralysed by a sort of superstitious terror.

Cristine had left so short a time before, full of health and spirits. Nora had noticed how pretty she looked in the soft creamy pink that always suited her best and supplied the one thing lacking to her coldly regular beauty ; and now what had stricken her down like this ? Cristine was not given to fainting. For

Nora saw little of her evening, though somehow she had a strange fascination. She followed the slender pink as it moved restlessly about rooms, into and out of the e never staying long in one spot by any chance approaching hardly listened to Lord de Grecton's mured chat, or the gentle buzz of conversation that went on around ; perplexed her—was Cristine or not ?

If she was, she changed her last moment. As Nora sat alone at last, resting her head on the sash of the window, and with aching wistful eyes at the splendor of the starlight in the door opened, and Cristine very weird and ghostlike in white wrapper, came in.

The other looked around at a small silver hand-lamp on a table, and, even in the self-analysis of her wretched thoughts, not strangely haggard was her aspect.

"Cristine, you are ill," cried ; but Cristine laughed her head impatiently.

"Cannot you forget that elementary weakness ? I never in my life. But enough of not see you much to-morrow, cannot take your direction there any one you have for one for whom you would like remembrance when you are gone."

The wild light eyes seemed to the pale bride's face ; she shuddered under the cruel persistance.

"No one ; there is nothing shortly. "Oh, by-the-way, not the girl bring a note for fore dinner ?"

She asked the question enough, grasping at any change of subject and caring the answer might be. But Cristine in her breath with a sharp lip pushed the fair fluffy hair back from her forehead with a tragic gesture.

"Really, I am unpardonable. I remember it all now. It was from Madame Josephine, about the arrangement of my think ; but I was taken ill moment, and—"

"Never mind, Cristine ; it matters not," the other said wearily. "train will do very well as it is."

"But I must have thrown down either in my room or to Cristine persisted, knitting her brows in extreme perplexity, search for it and find it—be bed."

"You will do nothing of the sort," Nora cried peremptorily, being selfishly anxious for herself. She was really shocked by the look of her step-sister's face.

She started at the sound of Nora's voice, and gave a quick look of angry terror—a most inexplicable look, even admitting that her mind still wandered.

"How is it you are in this condition?" Nora said quietly. "You were quite well when you left me, Cristine. What has happened since?"

She grew suddenly scarlet, stared straight into the other's eyes, as though she would read her inmost thoughts, then turned away, saying shortly, almost sullenly—

"I ran too quickly. I felt a sharp pain here"—touching her left side—"and I remember nothing more."

Nora stared at her, a little incredulously perhaps—the explanation seemed so improbable. A run across the corridor upset Cristine Singleton—Cristine, who would dance from midnight to dawn and never turn a hair, who was the skillfullest tennis-player in all Nettleton! The girl who knew her best could hardly believe it. Yet there was no gainsaying her ghastly looks.

"Go down, Nora," she said, as the great gong gave its final clang. "I will follow almost directly."

"Shall I send Mrs. Bruce to you?" Nora asked doubtfully. It seemed cruel to leave her thus, and yet she knew she must go.

But Cristine negatived the idea, and entreated her to say nothing of her illness, trembling so violently all the time that the girl thought she would soon betray herself, whether she kept her secret or no. Argument only served to irritate her, and time began to press; so at last, with extreme reluctance, Miss Bruce went.

It hardly seemed likely that Cristine would make her appearance that night; but almost before the guests filed in stately fashion into the great dining-room, and just as Mrs. Bruce began to

"I do feel worn out," Cristine confessed, with a queer smile, "and, as chief bridesmaid, I should like to look my best to-morrow. Well, Nora, good-night. Hark! What is that?"

It was the mighty voice of "Big Ben" floating through the open window, beating the twelve solemn strokes that told the great restless city that another day was dead.

The girls listened in breathless silence till the last vibration died away, each stroke falling with deadly import on Nora Bruce's strained sense of hearing, and bringing a stranger light to Cristine Singleton's face. With the last, she flung both arms around her sister's neck and kissed her with a sort of exultant passion.

"Long life and happiness to our bonny bride!" she cried, in shrill vibrating tones. "Fate has been kind to me. Lady de Gretton, remember always that I was the first to offer my congratulations and good wishes on your wedding-morning."

CHAPTER VI.

"It was the prettiest wedding of the season!" On that point complimentary friends, fashionable reporters and the rougher critics gathered in the ultra-fashionable church to witness the gorgeously-mounted ceremony were alike agreed; and, if the last were rather disposed to think that a younger bridegroom would have made the picture complete, even these admitted that Lord de Gretton, with his slender upright figure and well-preserved handsome face, was still a stately and a personable man.

Ten bridesmaids, dressed in the latest bridal fashion, with veils and wreaths and shimmering satin dresses, with lockets bearing the blent initials of the bridal pair in diamonds, followed Nora Bruce to the altar, and, as they posed picturesquely behind her, envied the pale bride in their inmost hearts.

They were all, with the exception of Cristine, "damsels of high degree," chosen from the circle of Lord de Gretton's friends, knowing nothing of and caring nothing for the bride, and secretly resenting the fact that the bridegroom had wandered from his own world in search of a wife.

Rich, still agreeable, and eligible in every way, he had been comparatively left alone by chaperons and passed over by prudent parents because by common consent every one had given him to Lady Olivia Blake; and Lady Olivia herself was not more angry and indignant when she discovered the sorry part she had been made to play than was

They were all, with the exception of Cristine, "damsels of high degree," chosen from the circle of Lord de Gretton's friends, knowing nothing of and caring nothing for the bride, and secretly resenting the fact that the bridegroom had wandered from his own world in search of a wife.
Rich, still agreeable, and eligible in every way, he had been comparatively left alone by chaperons and passed over by prudent parents because by common consent every one had given him to Lady Olivia Blake; and Lady Olivia herself was not more angry and indignant when she discovered the sorry part she had been made to play than was "Society" in realising the trick played upon it. "Society" and Lady Olivia however had, with excellent world-wisdom, determined to pocket the affront and countenance the ceremony. The former thronged the church in the persons of its most charming and sharp-tongued representatives. The latter, gorgeous in a costume of olive-green, stamped velvet, and satin that suited her dark beauty to perfection, stood tranquilly conscious of the thousand eager eyes that watched her with malicious interest, almost on the altar-steps, almost by the bridegroom's side, accepting the situation with a fierce defiant pride that moved those who knew her story best to a sort of admiring sympathy.
"How well she bears it!" the gossips whispered to one another behind their ivory- and -velvet prayer-books. "He treated her shamefully—quite shamefully, you know. She actually wore the diamonds at the palace ball. Yes, the bride has them on now. Quite shocking, I call it—so much worse than if she were a girl—for a woman of Olivia's age ridicule is death. Yet really, you know, it is wonderful. She looks quite handsome to-day—does she not?"
"Yes, the bride does not shine by comparison, young as she is—a poor lifeless looking thing, I call her. Are her people at all presentable, by-the-way?"
"There they are!" the first speaker said, nodding her head in the direction of Captain and Mrs. Bruce. "Do you see—a stout over-dressed woman in garnet silk and white lace, who looks absurdly important and pleased with herself and surroundings, and a thin white-haired man, who does not seem to share her feelings? He is something in the Navy, or Coast-guard. They were quite awfully poor, I hear, and I dare say compassed heaven and earth to ensare De Gretton!"
So, in its accustomed charitable fashion, "Society" gossiped and speculated while the solemn words were spoken, while the soft sweet music floated through the church, while Nora Bruce knelt beside the man from whom she shrank with an hourly-increasing intensity of repugnance,

Nora saw little of her through the evening, though somehow her movements had a strange fascination for her. She followed the slender pink-robed form as it moved restlessly about the large rooms, into and out of the conservatory, never staying long in one spot, and never by any chance approaching her. She hardly listened to Lord de Gretton's murmured chat, or the gentle buzz of conversation that went on around; the question perplexed her—was Cristine avoiding her or not?

If she was, she changed her plan at the last moment. As Nora sat in her room, alone at last, resting her hot head against the sash of the window, and looking up with aching wistful eyes at the serene splendor of the starlight midnight sky, the door opened, and Cristine, looking very weird and ghostlike in her long white wrapper, came in.

The other looked around as she set her small silver hand-lamp down upon the table, and, even in the self-absorption of her wretched thoughts, noticed how strangely haggard was her aspect.

"Cristine, you are ill again!" she cried; but Cristine laughed and shook her head impatiently.

"Cannot you forget that foolish momentary weakness? I never was better in my life. But enough of me. I may not see you much to-morrow, Nora; so I cannot take your directions now. Is there any one you have forgotten, any one for whom you would like to leave a remembrance when you are gone?"

The wild light eyes seemed to burn into the pale bride's face; she stirred restlessly under the cruel persistent gaze.

"No one; there is nothing," Nora said shortly. "Oh, by-the-way, Cristine, did not the girl bring a note for me just before dinner?"

She asked the question indifferently enough, grasping at any pretext for a change of subject and caring little what the answer might be. But Cristine drew in her breath with a sharp little cry, and pushed the fair fluffy hair back from her forehead with a tragic gesture of despair.

"Really, I am unpardonable, Nora; I remember it all now. It was a message from Madame Josephine, something about the arrangement of your train, I think; but I was taken ill just at the moment, and—"

"Never mind, Cristine; what does it matter?" the other said wearily. "The train will do very well as it is."

"But I must have thrown the note down either in my room or the corridor," Cristine persisted, knitting her light brows in extreme perplexity. "I will search for it and find it before I go to bed."

"You will do nothing of the kind," Nora cried peremptorily, for, besides, being selfishly anxious for solitude, she was really shocked by the worn, aged look of her step-sister's face and the ivory—and velvet prayer-books. She treated her shamefully—quite shamefully, you know. She actually wore the diamonds at the palace ball. Yes, the bride has them on now. Quite shocking, I call it—so much worse than if she were a girl—for a woman of Olivia's age ridicule is death. Yet really, you know, it is wonderful. She looks quite handsome to-day—does she not?"

"Yes, the bride does not shine by comparison, young as she is—a poor lifeless looking thing, I call her. Are her people at all presentable, by-the-way?"

"There they are!" the first speaker said, nodding her head in the direction of Captain and Mrs. Bruce. "Do you see—a stout over-dressed woman in garnet silk and white lace, who looks absurdly important and pleased with herself and surroundings, and a thin white-haired man, who does not seem to share her feelings? He is something in the Navy, or Coast-guard. They were quite awfully poor, I hear, and I dare say compassed heaven and earth to ensare De Gretton!"

So, in its accustomed charitable fashion, "Society" gossiped and speculated while the solemn words were spoken, while the soft sweet music floated through the church, while Nora Bruce knelt beside the man from whom she shrank with an hourly-increasing intensity of repugnance, and heard, with a deathly faintness at her heart, the priest's calm tones pronounce them man and wife.

"Those whom God hath joined together let no man put asunder!"

Like one in a trance the girl listened to the words so full of solemn and awful meaning—so mystically sweet to those who hear them with mutual love and trust, so terrible to those who seal a loveless bond and know that hope and freedom may be theirs never more.

It was her death sentence, Nora thought, glancing wildly around her. Some one was murdered,—was it Arthur Beaupre?—and she was here to answer for the crime. It was not a church, but a grim guilt-stained court in which she stood. It was not a silver-tongued and fashionable priest lisping forth the marriage blessing, but a judge who was sentencing her to die!

To die! When? To-day—to-morrow? Ah, well, that mattered little. It was easy, so easy to die; and after death there would come peace and rest, and—yes, if Heaven were merciful—the touch of Arthur's hand, the glad forgiveness of Arthur's kind blue eyes. He might forgive her then—for, even though she were the guilty crime-stained wretch they called her, though she left this world that had been too hard for her through the dark portal of a shameful death, she would still be true to him.

The girl's brain reeled with the delirious fancy, her gray eyes flashed through the rich lace of her veil with a light so insanely happy that Cristine, who stood

"Nora!" she cried in a sharp whisper;
and with a little shiver the miserable

The wedding-march sounded as the bridal-party came back from the vestry;
the eager sightseers parted right and left to let the gay procession pass down the central aisle, through the tall gray gates, and down the red-carpeted steps. Lord
de Gretton, with his bride upon his arm, came first; and he carried his well-shaped gray head erect, with a gallant grace that well became him—so the on-lookers declared.

Perhaps it was well he did so. It would neither have swelled his triumph nor sweetened his temper to look on the dazed hopeless misery of the face and dark anguished eyes beneath the Brussels veil and orange-blossom wreath. Strangely enough, however, the happy bridegroom was at that moment thinking less of his bride than of the handsome dark-eyed woman whose strange tranquillity of look had in some queer fashion shaken his nerves and annoyed him.

(TO BE CONTINUED).

Destruction of Russian Forests.

The constantly increasing destruction of Russian forests is naturally discussed with much interest by Russian papers. In the last hundred years the forest area
Russia has diminished from 11 per cent.
in Tver to 46 per cent. in Riazan. The beautiful oak forests are becoming extinct.
Of the celebrated chestnut woods of Vas-silsoursk, which date from the time of Peter the Great, only the borders exist
at present, while all the interior is ravaged. The extensive forests on the banks of Volga and Don, which once reached far into the steppes toward the Ural mountain, are now destroyed and so many millions of trees have been felled in the interior of Russia that wood is becoming scarce in many provinces. The destruction is carried on very systematically; but, before long, it will of needs
come to an end, if the enormous consumption of firewood is not energetically stopped. Considering the amount of fuel required for Russian railways, steamers, and factories, it is not surprising that,
during the last twenty years, the aspect of the wooded country has greatly changed. Wood, however, is becoming more expensive, and the importation of coal is being seriously considered by large consumers, while petroleum offered a third alternative of daily increasing popularity.

Summary of Foreign, Domestic and War Items.

CANADIAN.

A new weekly journal is being established in Montreal, with the noted Capt.
Kerwin as editor. It is called the Pilot.

The flouring mills of Moore & Son, of Walkerton, have been destroyed by fire, together with 600 bushels of wheat and a quantity of flour.

A great railway strike of the engineers took place in Manitoba. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers repudiate
all responsibility of it.

The Department of Agriculture has forwarded several cases of immigration literature to England for distribution by the Government agent there.

Several ladies recently applied for the privilege of attending lectures at the University College, but the former decision to exclude them has been re-affirmed by the Senate.

Mr. Isaac Powley, a farmer of Kingston township, was killed at the Cataract railway crossing. His remains were carried on the front of the engine to the Kingston station, two miles distant.

Mrs. George Myers, of Thurlow, while preparing breakfast a few mornings ago, had her dress ignited by a spark from the stove, and narrowly escaped with her life.
Her husband had his hands very badly
burned in putting the fire out.

Sir Leonard Tilley was waited on the other day in Toronto by those interested in establishing large iron smelting and steel works in that city. They wanted a bonus of seven dollars per ton on the iron produced. He promised to give the matter his best consideration.

The plans for the new ice palace for the Montreal carnival are now ready. The building will be entirely of ice, consisting of 10,000 blocks, of 40x20 inches square each. The palace will be 160 feet long and 65 feet at its greatest depth. There will be a main tower 76 feet high. The total cost is estimated at $3,000.

Alexander Patterson, of Belleville, was going from his home to a fire company meeting last week with $300 in his possession to pay the company, from the corporation. He was knocked down and senseless in the street and his pockets rifled, but the $300 was in an inside pocket and not obtained. He thinks he

Women as Lawyears.

Women are applying everywhere in the United States for full admission in the courts as lawyers. One was refused the other day in Pennsylvania, but in several of the other States they do not experience any such difficulty. The Bar of Canada may well become alarmed. Women will soon be knocking at the door here, as well. They have already forced open the doors of the Medical Profession, and the Legal cannot resist them when the siege begins in dead earnest. That will be an evil day for the lawyers. Let women once get an even start in the Courts, and where will the men come out? In three-fourths of the cases of contention now, women carry the day,
and in "courting" the conquest is almost invariably on her side. Few men can resist her "pleadings, even in their present non-professional shape, and how much more becoming the silk gowns will look on their shoulders! And where will a man stand among those he desires as clients and customers when it comes to "getting out an attachment?" The outlook is decidedly bad for the lawyers, but there is no use resisting fate. The woman's hour has struck.

An Obstinate Wife.

The other night a policeman who was patrolling High street east heard a whistle blown, followed by shouts for "police!"
and after a run of half a block he came to a halt in front of a house where a secondstory window was raised and a man had half his length over the sill.

"What's the row?" demanded the officer.

"Some purglars vhas in mein house!"
was the answer.

Her husband had his hands very badly
burned in putting the fire out.

Sir Leonard Tilley was waited on the died in Michigan a few days ago at the advanced age of 102 years, did not at all compare with Mrs. Taylor, who resides on the Hamilton road, a few miles west of this city. Mrs. Taylor is now in her 107th year, and is still healthy. In her appearance she would be placed in the sixties. Nor have the effects of a prolonged life shown any marks on her excellent memory or general habits.

UNITED STATES.

A woman, Mrs. Carrie B. Kilgore, recently applied for permission to practice in the Common Pleas Court at Philadelphia. Judge Hare refused permission, as he deemed it contrary to the spirit of the present laws of Pennsylvania.

At New Orleans election Democratic meeting, to nominate candidates to the State Convention, much ill-feeling was shown, which culminated in bloodshed.
About fifty pistol shots were fired, and several well-known citizens killed, while a number of others were badly wounded.

A Jewish synagogue in Chicago was entered a few nights ago by some miscreants
and nearly all the interior ornamentation and gas fixtures were destroyed. The curtains and gowns were torn to pieces and much other harm done. No special reason is assigned, other than the anti-
Jewish feeling rankling in some hearts.

At Fort Smith, Indian Territory, recently, Levi James, the Choctaw Indian convicted last November of the murder of James Fulson, was shot at Scullyville court-house, in accordance with the Cho-

the sheriff held one hand and a deputy-

An Obstinate Wife.

The other night a policeman who was patrolling High street east heard a whistle blown, followed by shouts for "police!" and after a run of half a block he came to a halt in front of a house where a second-story window was raised and a man had half his length over the sill.

"What's the row?" demanded the officer.

"Some purglars vhas in mein house!" was the answer.

"How do you know?"

"I hears them make a noise more ash six times!"

"Where are they?"

"Down in der kitchen!"

"Have you been down to look around?"

"No! no! I tells my vwife to go, but she won't stir! She shumps into bedt und covers oop her headt, und I vhas left to do all der fighting und be kilt! Dot's der kind of a vwife she vhas."

"I am very sorry for you, sir, but my daughter has been brought up to a life of luxury, and I can never allow her to become your wife."

"But you forget. I am a prosperous broker."

"Yes, I know that; but the markets are very uncertain, and you may be a poor man to-morrow."

"But I own a rolling mill, too."

"So I understand; but the iron business is subject to great fluctuations."

"And I have three woollen mills, am a member of a jobbing firm, and own a large amount of real estate."

"All of them are uncertain properties. Even real estate is being ruined by high taxes. Have you anything else?"

"Yes, I own a newspaper."

"Oh, I beg your pardon. Take her, my dear boy. She is yours."

Jefferson left such minute instructions as to the simplicity of any memorial to be set over his grave that, in order to spend five thousand dollars, half the sum appropriated by Congress for the purpose of honoring him, the greater part had to be put into the fence.

About fifty pistol shots were fired, and several well-known citizens killed, while a number of others were badly wounded.

A Jewish synagogue in Chicago was entered a few nights ago by some miscreants and nearly all the interior ornamentation and gas fixtures were destroyed. The curtains and gowns were torn to pieces and much other harm done. No special reason is assigned, other than the anti-Jewish feeling rankling in some hearts.

At Fort Smith, Indian Territory, recently, Levi James, the Choctaw Indian convicted last November of the murder of James Fulsom, was shot at Scullyville court-house, in accordance with the Choctaw law. James sat upon a blanket, and the sheriff held one hand and a deputy-sheriff the other. Another deputy took a position five paces distant with a Colt's revolver. He deliberately aimed, and shot him through the heart. He died in two minutes. James was educated in a good family, and leaves a white wife and five small children.

Mr. Gladstone is to be honored by the Greeks with a statute in Athens. He is said to be the only living man in whose honor a statute has been erected in a foreign country. A year ago subscriptions were asked for the purpose, and so liberal was the response that twice as much money as is required has already been sent in.

There is little wonder that bee keeping is so much on the increase in Ontario for it is one of the most profitable industries going. The little creatures are not very difficult to manage when people have got into their ways, and the work about them become rather a pleasure than otherwise. In a few years bee farming will be very common. Graping growing also is looking up. There is no reason why there should not be far more of it than there is. The whole of the Niagara peninsula will by and bye be given over to fruit trees and vines.

The Brooklyn Bridge has already got to be re-floored. The story goes that Jay Gould "cornered" all the Georgia pine of the requisite grade in the market, to spite Ex-Mayor Grace, who had the contract; and it would seem that the latter got even out o he public.

FASHION NOTES.

Trains are fuller.
Trains are not long.
Gloves are very long.
Mask veils are much worn.
Few trained dresses are worn.
Sleeves remain very tight below the elbow.

Dotted face veils are in high fashionable favor.

Gentleman's driving gloves have very large gauntlets.

Jewels are much in favor for the hair at evening parties and balls.

Tan-colored Suede gloves divide favor with white and black gloves for evening wear.

Children's dresses are all made loose about the waist, in the late revived English styles.

Short dresses are much in vogue for evening wear, even when the wearers do not dance.

Gauzy stuffs, tulles, crapes, and silk and Indian muslins are in demand for ball and fancy party dresses.

Tulle spotted or sprigged with silver comes among other gauzy tinsel decorated stuffs for evening wear.

The bodice with a high back and low cut out front is the correct wear for dinner parties and evening receptions.

Sleeves of costumes of ceremony are made tight, but the puffs or epaulette appendages in the armhole or on the shoulders.

The few trained dresses lately brought from the other side have the princess back, under which disappear the high puffed panier draperies.

The most fashionable ornaments for the hair are crescents, stars, strays, and combs of Rhine crystals, often so fine as to be mistaken for diamonds.

Birds and butterflies of the most tropical appearance are placed flat on the corsages and draperies of many gauzy and tinsel-embroidered ball dresses.

Caps of pleated lace, puffs of tulle and gauze and of beaded net are added to the sleeves of high corsages to give the high-shouldered epaulette effect.

Neapolitan jewellery consisting of brooches, lace pins, rings and bangles of silver filigree in all sorts of fanciful forms, such as tambourines, serpents, mandolins, violins, and guitars, are bought eagerly for holiday gifts.

do as well as, and oftener much better than men, if Mrs. Grundy would only keep quiet, and other old ladies in our pulpits and newspapers only stop raising the alarming cry that women are being "unsexed." In Russia women are now being greatly encouraged to apply themselves to watch-making, jewelry, and other such light and skillful occupations. A woman in New York is reported to be making the delicate instruments used by the most skillful surgeons in that city. In other localities women are being looked for in connection with the drug stores.

Let some of our Canadian "rights" men, and women too, give a friendly hand towards opening more widely such doors to women here and a good practical step will be taken, and let them, if need be, clap their hands over the mouth of the next man who raises the "unsex" racket.

Snakes in the Grass

BY ERNEST J. OLDMEADOW.

Beneath the ample shadow of their waggon
Some lonely emigrants have built their fire;

The flames leap up like some fierce, captive dragon

Which struggles in its ire.

Mother and children peacefully are sleeping
Beside the roaring camp-fire's cheerful glow;

The settler, gun in hand, his watch is keeping
'Gainst wolf and Indian foe

All the hot day he's been alert and wary,
Now he must watch all through the weary night;

And, till the dawn, must scan the rolling prairie,
Patched with the young moon's light.

How chill the moonbeams are! How sad and dreary

The drowsy waters mid the rushes weep;
He lets his tired eyes close, with watching weary,

Lies down—and falls asleep!

The pale moon's beams upon the plain are lying,

A gentle murmur rises from the rill;
The night wind through the swaying grass is sighing,
And all things else are still.

Is it the night wind sighing in the grasses?
Is it the wind which makes them bend
and shake?

Ah, no! Into the moonlit space there passes
A coiling rattlesnake!

It sees the watchman sleeping at his station,

And glides along with fiercely flaming
gaze,

Its eyes reflect in dreadful concentration
The roaring camp fire's blaze.

Hints on Butter Making.

At the recent Dairyman's Convention in Quebec, Mr. W. H. Lynch, who is probably the best authority on scientific dairy work in Canada, gave a most instructive address on the subject, of which the following is a brief resume:—Mr. Lynch in the course of his remarks said a dry goods firm, at great expense, brought out Professor Sheldon with an English dairy, to attend the last Dominion Exhibition at St. John, N.B., and purely for an advertisement of their business. This fact was proof enough, if any were wanted, of the great need for something being done to improve the dairy industry. The bringing out of Professor Sheldon had the effect of satisfying the people of Canada, there represented, that nothing they could send us from England is calculated to help us: it also had the effect of drawing attention to the simple utensils before the meeting that had been exhibited so long as two years ago in the Lower Provinces, and which are now endorsed by authorities, Canadian, American and English, and have been sometimes in successful operation in parts of the Eastern Townships. He explained that he occupied a different position from the other authorities. Butter making hitherto has been a matter of experience, judgment and manual skill. It was a coy art, hard to catch and not easy to hold. The object of the speaker had been to make this useful art a matter, not so much of manual skill, as of mechanical aids. In this he believed he could demonstrate that he had succeeded. Butter-making was essentially a mechanical process, and it was by taking advantage of that fact that he accomplished what had been done. It was a strong point gained that which improved implements and taking advantage of what the farmer already knows of the subject, one day was enough to place an outfit in successful working hands of the average farmer, and thus practically place a model dairy in all the farm-houses of the country. Here he proceeded to illustrate how all through the process the essentials of the successful prosecution of the art were involved in simple, cheap mechanical appliances. For instance, water was utilized instead of air to separate the cream, its many advantages, as pointed out, lying in the fact that it is available at a less variable temperature than air and is a better conductor of heat. In the construction of the churn were involved the important points of saving the grain and the complete separation of the caseine from the butter. One of the most striking features of this, the new and scientific process, was the use of a granulated butter holder, by means of which

In the construction of the churn were involved the important points of saving the grain and the complete separation of the caseine from the butter. One of the most striking features of this, the new and scientific process, was the use of a granulated butter holder, by means of which small dairies could make full packages of butter at each packing, and so secure the advantage hitherto peculiar to the large dairy or creamery. The novelties of a strainer milking pail and an air-tight tub were explained, and shown to form an important part of his interesting, simple and valuable outfit, that is apparently enough almost to revolutionize the dairy industry. He spoke also strongly of the importance of quality in butter, especially from an economic point of view. Mr. Lynch was frequently applauded during the course of his interesting address, which absorbed all the morning session.

The Woman Question.

The "Woman question" is not likely to be such a difficult problem in the future as many wise men feared it would. "What shall we do with all the women?" some philosophers used to discuss with very great earnestness. What shall the women do for themselves, is, after all, the most sensible and most important. The best thing and the wisest thing to do is simply to open up to women the various branches of industry to which she is well adapted, and in doing this there is not much else required. There are hundreds and hundreds of things that women can

The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company's Produce Exhibition Car.

A Conservatory on Wheels—The Energy and Enterprise of a Western Railway Which Sends Dakota's Products on an Exhibition Tour.

One of the most notable but quiet enterprises for advertising purposes which any state or railroad can boast of, has been quietly going on in the midst of our Ontario farmers. The Milwaukee and St. Paul railway company, conceiving the idea that the best way to surmount the reports of hard winters, blizzards and small crops, was to exhibit to the farmers (the class mostly interested) some of the many products which are the pride of

THE STATE OF DAKOTA.

This vast territory contains 150,932 square miles or 96,500,000 of acres of the best farming land to be found in North America. It is situated between the 42nd and 49th degrees of north latitude and the 10th and 29th degrees of longitude west of Washington. The extent of this state is more than France and twice as large as Great Britain and Ireland. That this territory has the most unbounded resources could easily be seen, if space would admit of the enumeration of its mineral resources, and as well as from the annual report of its products from all sources. Those figures although correct, could not convince any person more plainly than the exhibit made in the fine large car of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway company, which is now visiting (for the benefit of farmers) the various towns and cities in Ontario. A brief description of this elegant may not be out of place. Upon entering the car from either end, one cannot help feeling he has suddenly entered a conservatory arrayed in the most artistic manner, wreaths of corn, wheat, tobacco leaf and many grains and grasses, are woven and interwoven around roof and sides, in a thorough and artistic manner, bouquets of all styles made from earth's fruits are scattered around most profusely, until one can scarcely believe he is not attending the exhibit of a French school of vegetable cookery, preparatory to the cooking process. One of the most notable ornaments in the car is a large bell hung in the centre of the car the lower part of which is made of wheat, corn rye, grasses, etc., and the upper part of corn and vegetables, for a clapper or hammer, a fine clapper-shaped squash is hung in the centre by a blue ribbon, under this bell a prize in money will be given to the loving couple who will join in the bonds of matrimony.

The increase in population in one year, from 1881 to 1882, was 43,354. With such an increase in population any person would think the answer to all false reports a pretty plain one, for not only has the population of Dakota increased but it is found that under the liberal homestead and other laws of the United States its "free lands" are rapidly being disposed of. The report shows that of 15,669,848 acres of public lands entered under the various acts during the period above mentioned, not less than 4,568,919 acres or nearly one-third were disposed of in Dakota alone. Of the total acreage of 6,347,729, entered under the homestead act in twenty-four states and territories 2,187,415, or more than one third was taken up in Dakota, and that under the timber act more than one-half of the 2,609,797 acres disposed of were entered in this territory. The rapid growth of this territory is mainly due to the energy, enterprise and business push of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Co., which has run its rails in all directions through the territory, and which does not hesitate to run forty and fifty miles of a branch track when accommodation is wanted. Particularly is this noticed at Roscoe. The company has a regular emigration bureau attached to its service, and keeps regular travelling agents to attend to the wants of emigrants alone. No person not employed by the company is allowed in or around the company's emigration offices or railroads, and its system of detectives very soon ferret out any persons desirous of playing tricks upon emigrants. Mitchell and Aberdeen are the two great headquarters for the emigrants where the company's offices are situated. The company's produce exhibition car has been in Ontario under the direct supervision of M. H. Mercer of the emigration department of the road and Mr. Wallace Heafford, Canadian passenger agent of the company.—Toronto World, 27th, 1883.

tistic manner, wreaths of corn, wheat, tobacco leaf and many grains and grasses, are woven and interwoven around roof and sides, in a thorough and artistic manner, bouquets of all styles made from earth's fruits are scattered around most profusely, until one can scarcely believe he is not attending the exhibit of a French school of vegetable cookery, preparatory to the cooking process. One of the most notable ornaments in the car is a large bell hung in the centre of the car the lower part of which is made of wheat, corn rye, grasses, etc., and the upper part of corn and vegetables, for a clapper or hammer, a fine clapper-shaped squash is hung in the centre by a blue ribbon, under this bell a prize in money will be given to the loving couple who will join in the bonds of matrimony.

A FEW GOOD THINGS TO SEE.

Corn in twelve varieties, including pop corn and the Dent corn, of which some very fine samples are shown, the Flint corn cobs, measuring sixteen inches in length. Radishes of the size of large rats and similarly shaped, turnips, carrots and rutabaga in endless variety, the Little Queen, Mother Hubbard, Turban, Scollop and other varieties of squashes. The pumpkin display was very fine, $30 having been offered for one sample of sweet pumpkins. In the potato department the Early Ohio was the most prominent, not a single potato weighed less than two pounds, some of them running to three pounds; there were the Snow Flake, White Elephant, White Star, Peach Blow, Burbank, Seedling, Western Red, and Victor. The display of grasses, Prairie red top, five feet in height, Blue joint, seven feet in height, Slough grasses and other varieties are woven in all directions as well as standing in the sheaf. Sweet potatoes and tobacco grown at Yanktown, timothy, clover, onions of several varieties, including the Weathersfield, Yellow Denver, Silver Skin, and Early Red, some very fine citrons, watermelons and crab apples. One long, clean looking cotton wood tree, about 20 feet long, attracts unusual attention; it was planted two years ago from a slip, and is now 3½ inches in diameter, which clearly shows the speed with which a young plant will quietly increase in value. Some very fine samples of timber grown from seed are displayed in many varieties, including soft maple, box elder, white ash, cotton wood, and apple, samples of Okra, Martinua, hops, parsnips, and cucumbers of two varieties.

THE GRAIN DISPLAY

is particularly fine, both in sheaves and bottles, and many varieties are shown, particularly the Dakota, No. 1 hard, Mediterranean Spring, and other early wheat grown around Yankton are very conspicuous. Both black and white oats are displayed, and among the latter are some exceedingly fine samples of White Russian, Flax seed, buckwheat, rye, barley, peas and berries can be found in another department, and also samples of fine, white flour from Chamberlain and ground at the mills of J. F. Sisson & Co. Sorghum or sugar cane and broom corn of great length decorate the roof of the car, and are interwoven with small sheafs of wheat cut at full length. On the bottom of the car are some very fine samples of Sioux Falls granite. The stone is compact and polishes to a high degree and is used in the erection of the finest structures at St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn. The finest

The stone is compact and polishes to a high degree and is used in the erection of the finest structures at St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn. The finest class of stone for art work in the collection is the conglomerated stone which once polished for table tops, mantlepieces, etc., would become the rage rapidly. The stone from which Indians make their pipes is also shown, and as a curiosity the autograph of the noted Sitting Bull, written in a plain school boy hand, also a handsome and curious walking cane cut on the Missouri river is one of the greatest of curiosities.

CLIMATE, STORMS AND RAINS.

So much has been said in respect to the blizzards and heavy storms that are claimed for Dakota that a few statistics will not be amiss, and the reader should bear in mind that on account of the vastness of the territory a great difference will be found to exist between the region north of the 47th parallel and that south of it. In southeastern Dakota, the climate in many respects resembles that of Indiana, Ohio, Iowa and southern Minnesota, with a greater number of sunny, and a less number of rainy days. The summers are agreeable, and little inconvenience is experienced from heat, owing to the prairie breezes which prevail during the warmer months. The fir is pure and dry in summer, clear and bracing in winter, and affords remarkable relief to persons suffering from incipient consumption, etc. Malarial diseases are wholly unknown. The winters are not severe, and the climate during the whole year compares more than favorably with the states before mentioned. From the tabulated statement of the signal office at Washington for a period covering 87 years, it is found that not a single cyclone has touched this territory whilst other states and territories have suffered 600 tornadoes, particularly in Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Ohio and Indiana. That this territory has become a favored one for farming there is no doubt, and that Canadians have found it particularly so will be shown by the following returns made in 1880:

AN ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Write to the Author if you wish.

Andrew Dinsmore, the well-known agriculturist of Grey County, Ont., one of the most extensive importers and breeders of thoroughbred stock, who resides on his fine stock-farm near Thornbury, writes: For over ten years I suffered intensely with dyspepsia and water-brash, my life was one of misery. I procured advice and medicine from the best physicians in Canada, without benefit; my case was said to be incurable. I then gave a fair trial to almost every patent medicine recommended. None, however, relieved me until I tried Hoffman's German Bitters, the first dose gave me instant relief, it appeared to go to the right place, soothing and healing the soreness. I am able to eat almost anything I desire now. A fifty cent bottle has been worth thousands to me.

The Napanee Express.

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, JAN. 4, 1884.

Marriage Licenses

issued by Ogden Finch, at Cheapside, (applications strictly private and confidential.) 40-1y

—The express trains on the Grand Trunk have been delayed by the recent snow storm.

—Mr. C. Fessenden contributed a well written letter to Tuesday's Mail on the University question.

—A number of young people from Napanee and Newburgh attended the Bachelor's Ball at Sydenham Friday night.

—The firemen are arranging for an oyster supper to be given in a couple of weeks, of which due notice will be given in our next issue.

—C. E. Bartlett keeps the best of fresh butter and eggs, green apples, etc., all cheap.

—C. M. Church, Sabbath, Jan. 6th—Rev. M. L. Pearson will preach at 10:30 a. m. and 6:30 p. m. Sunday School and Bible Class at 2:30 p. m.

—The case against Amey, charged with indecent assault upon his daughter, was dismissed on Friday last by the Mayor, the daughter not appearing against him.

—Mrs. Maria Platt, of Picton, mother of Dr. Platt, M. P., died on Christmas day at the advanced age of 72 years. She was a most estimable lady.

—At a meeting of members of the old Division Grange held last Saturday it was decided to defend the actions brought by L. A. Carscallen and A. H. Roe against them.

—The evidence in the arbitration case over right of way of the railway through the Glass Works property is all in. It is expected that the award will be made in a week or two.

—Rev. Dr. Rice, President of the General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada, will visit this county next week and will preach in the C. M. Church a week from Sunday evening.

—The collectors of the Decimal Fund of St. Mary Magdalene's Church acknowledge with very many thanks the generous donation of $25 from D. W. Allison, Esq., M. P.

—The heaviest snow fall within twenty-four hours that has taken place for years arrived on Thursday. The roads throughout the county are badly blocked. There are two feet of snow on the level.

—The Epiphany Festival of St. Mary Magdalene's Church will be held in the Opera House next Tuesday evening. Admission, 15c. The proceeds will be devoted to the Sunday School fund.

—A warrant was yesterday issued by the Mayor for the arrest of George Neilson on a charge of attempted rape on two little nieces, aged 10 and 5 years respectively. The information was laid by a neighbor, whose wife caught the scoundrel in the act.

—On your way to the post office or when at market leave your order for groceries at C. E. Bartlett's. It will be filled and delivered with neatness and dispatch.

—George Foster, who robbed Thompson's store at Harrowsmith, has been sent to the penitentiary for six years. The convict enters the institution for a third term. His proper name is James Jackson and his age 21. He has only been out of prison nine years during his lifetime.

—THE EXPRESS carrier boy returns thanks to the patrons of the paper for their liberal donations New Year's day. He prides himself on having had the most elaborate address ever issued in town, and one which though short, was crisp and to the point. He wishes all a happy and successful year.

—On Monday evening, Dec. 23rd, the members and friends of the Ameliasburg circuit presented their pastor, Rev. W. D. P. Wilson, with an elegant fur coat and a purse containing $50. ### ROUND TOWN.

Rev. R. J. and Mrs. Craig, of Deseronto, were presented on Saturday last with $35 and a fine collection of music.

C. E. Bartlett sells the finest uncolored Japan tea for 50c.

A tweed cape found at the entrance of the Campbell House yard can be obtained by the owner by applying at this office.

C. E. Bartlett is still selling 20 pounds of those splendid raisins for $1.00.

The Presbyterian Sunday School anniversary, which was to have been held last evening, was on account of the storm postponed till next Tuesday evening.

You can buy all kinds of vegetables by the peck or bag at C. E. Bartlett's.

M. E. Church, Sabbath, Jan. 6th. The pastor will preach both morning and evening. A sermon will be preached to young people in the evening. Mr. Akroyd will sing a solo at the evening service.

The Saved Army had a "Salvation Free and Easy" and watch-night service Monday night. There was a large attendance, and at the close the members, headed by the band, marched to the station and saw Capt. Atkins off.

Mrs. Henry Wartinan, who was in the stage at the time it collided with a Grand Trunk R.R. engine at the Cataraqui crossing, is improving. On Friday last she was removed from Dr. Bingham's to her home at Glenvale. She was taken out in a large sledge, the mattress she was lying upon being transferred from the bed to it.

The members and adherents of the Presbyterian Church in this town are reminded of the annual meeting of the congregation appointed to be held in the basement of the church on the evening of Wednesday, the 9th inst., at 7:30. The usual reports for the last year will be submitted, and the general business of the congregation considered. The congregation as a whole is respectfully requested to be present.

The M. E. Church is now engaged in raising $30,000 for their Superannuated Preachers' Fund. A convention was held on Wednesday evening in the M. E. Church here to arrange a plan of action for the Napanee District. Rev. H. W. Williams, P. E., was elected chairman, and A. L. Morden, Esq., Secretary. Deputations were appointed and a vigorous canvass is to be made at once.

Concert and Presentation

The new Opera House was Saturday evening at the concert. This was disappointing to the committee who had at considered an especially good ment. The proceeds lacked expenses. But the people enjoyed the entertainment all opening exercises were conducted by Mr. J. F. Robinson, after which Mr. I Atkins, after which Mr. I called to the chair and delivered a most appropriate address. The corner opening selection in excellent frequent contributors during the programme consisted of Burton of Kingston, h "Where is Heaven?" by Mesdames Mills and Garbutt, Blair, Burton, Cook, McBlair, Tilley; an appropriate termination by Mr. W. J. Black; and Pearson and Card and Ma presentation of colors to the No. 6, took place after the presentation was made by Cobourg in an appropriate banner was accepted by Li on behalf of the corps, thus singing "We will Rally Round the Banner." The banner is of red with large cross in the centre is scroll bearing the words "Death," and on each side "A." Near the top on the date of presentation and corps. At the base of words, "Jesus Bore the Cross a scroll at the bottom read for the Lord Everywhere, carried by the corps at grades. The concert was very sermon will be preached to the people in the evening. Mr. Akroyd will sing a solo at the evening service.

The Saved Army had a "Salvation Free and Easy" and watch-night service Monday night. There was a large attendance, and at the close the members, headed by the band, marched to the station and saw Capt. Atkins off.

Mrs. Henry Wartman, who was in the stage at the time it collided with a Grand Trunk R.R. engine at the Catarqui crossing, is improving. On Friday last she was removed from Dr. Bingham's to her home at Glenvale. She was taken out in a large sleigh, the mattress she was lying upon being transferred from the bed to it.

The members and adherents of the Presbyterian Church in this town are reminded of the annual meeting of the congregation appointed to be held in the basement of the church on the evening of Wednesday, the 9th inst., at 7:30. The usual reports for the last year will be submitted, and the general business of the congregation considered. The congregation as a whole is respectfully requested to be present.

The M. E. Church is now engaged in raising $30,000 for their Superannuated Preachers Fund. A convention was held on Wednesday evening in the M. E. Church here to arrange a plan of action for the Napanee District. Rev. H. W. Williams, P. E., was elected chairman, and A. L. Morden, Esq., Secretary. Deputations were appointed and a vigorous canvass is to be made at once.

Isaac Powley, Catarqui, recently killed on the Grand Trunk Railway, was a peculiar man. He made considerable money, but never invested it, and generally hid it in outlandish places. He told one person that he had bored a hole in the rafter of his barn and put his cash into it. To another he hinted that a pail of money was buried in a field. The members of his family have not been informed of these hiding places, consequently are now unable to find the money.

The Sunday School entertainment on Tuesday evening in the M. E. Church of this town was the most successful held for years. There were fully five hundred present, including the Sabbath School children. A very carefully prepared programme was first presented. Mr. H. V. Fralick, superintendent of the school, presided, supported by the pastor and Rev. Mr. Young. After the conclusion of the admirable programme refreshments were served in the basement. We congratulate the church on the success of their entertainment.

On Friday morning last the tender and a box car loaded with ties went off the Napanee & Tamworth R.R. at Yarker, tearing up the track for about 50 feet. The tender and the car were damaged. The accident took place at a cattle pass half a mile from Yarker, in passing over which it is supposed the tender broke and spread the track. The fireman had a narrow escape. He was on the tender and was thrown into the ditch. The tender caught one corner of the box car, which kept it from falling upon him. The engine belonged to the Grand Trunk and the box car to the Great Western.

IMPORTANT TO THE SICK.—Dr. McCullough, the celebrated European and American Physician, so famed for his unrivalled success in the treatment and cure of all chronic and lingering diseases, will visit Napanee, professionally, and may be consulted at the Huffman House from Friday, January the 11th, to Thursday, January the 17th, 1884. Therefore all so afflicted would do well to consult the Doctor at once and be restored to health and happiness. N. B.—See posted bills; also hand bills and circulars for testimonials. 8-2

New Readers.

Teachers are advised to delay in introducing new readers, as the Minister of Education is considering the desirability of having only one series.

Paying for a Stolen Ride.

Summonses were yesterday issued by the Mayor upon the application of Mr. M. C. Row, contractor, N., T. & Q. Railway, against John Lowry, David Lowry, Wm. Holmes, Eli Fry, L. Fox, Jacob Detlor and Walter Cook, all of Newburgh, for having entered upon the premises of the Railway Company on Christmas night and placing the hand-car on the track running it to Clark's Mills. They broke several parts of the car and left it in a demoralized state. Mr. Row is determined to put a stop to these depredations and will therefore make an example of these parties. The young men will find tampering with railway cars a very serious matter.

A Successful Dramatic Entertainment.

A large and fashionable audience greeted the presentation of Sterling Coyne's pretty comedy, "Checkmate," by the dramatic branch of the English Church Union, in the new Opera House, Friday evening last. The piece was elegantly put on and the acting was of a high order. A stranger would hardly have recognized the company as amateurs their playing being up to the average "professional." The wardrobes of the ladies were in exquisite taste and the scenic effects all that could be desired. Mrs. J. E. Herring as Mrs. Featherly, the devoted but injured wife, gave an all but perfect representation of the character and won the unanimous approval of the audience; Mrs. E. S. D. Stevenson, as Mrs. Swandown, successfully assumed the character of the fascinating and designing widow, with charming piquancy; while Mrs. W. K. Pruyne's Mrs. Major De Boots, the strong-minded female who ruled both De Boots and his home with an iron will, was a faithful rendition of a somewhat difficult part. Mr. J. S. Robinson, in the role of Mr. Featherly, everybody's friend, was not at his best, but still he left little wanting in his representation. Napanee audiences have seen him do much better. To Mr. Frank Hamilton, as usual, fell the lot to provoke the laughter of the audience and this he was eminently successful in doing as as Major Wellington DeBoots, the would-be brave militia officer. Mr. James L. Herring, as Mr. Icebrook, the bashful lover, sustained the part most creditably. Master George Stevenson took the character of Fanny, the house maid, and a most bewitch-

both De Boots and his home with an iron will, was a faithful rendition of a somewhat difficult part. Mr. J. S. Robinson, in the ring, as Mr. Icebrook, the bashful lover, sustained the part most creditably. Master George Stevenson took the character of Fanny, the house maid, and a most bewitching little girl he made. His was a most successful rendition, as was also that of Master

J. F. Robinson's Trap. The entire audience was delighted and the hope was expressed that the Union would at an early date provide a bill of entertainment equally as good.
The proceeds amounted to about $150.

Concert and Presentation of Colors.

The new Opera House was only half filled
Saturday evening at the Saved Army concert.
This was disappointing to the committee who had at considerable expense provided an especially good bill of entertainment. The proceeds lacked $5 of the expenses. But the people who turned out enjoyed the entertainment all the same. The opening exercises were conducted by Capt.
Atkins, after which Mr. Dennis Daly was called to the chair and delivered an appropriate address. The cornet band played an opening selection in excellent style and were frequent contributors during the evening.
The programme consisted of singing by Miss Burton of Kingston, her rendition of
"Where is Heaven?" being especially fine;
Mesdames Mills and Garbut, Misses Briggs,
Blair, Burton, Cook, McBean, and Mr. F.
Tilley; an appropriate temperance reading
by Mr. W. J. Black; addresses by Revs.
Pearson and Card and Mayor James. The presentation of colors to the Napanee corps,
No. 6, took place after the first part. The presentation was made by Capt. Aitkens of Cobourg in an appropriate speech and the banner was accepted by Lieuts. Lee and Ely on behalf of the corps, the whole company singing "We will Rally Round the Banner."
The banner is of red with gold letters. A large cross in the centre is surmounted by a scroll bearing the words, "Victory or Death," and on each side are the letters "S"
"A." Near the top on each side are the date of presentation and the No. of the corps. At the base of the cross are the words, "Jesus Bore the Cross for Me," and a scroll at the bottom reads, "We will Fight for the Lord Everywhere." The banner is carried by the corps at their outdoor parades. The concert was very enjoyable. It is to be hoped the Army's next effort in this direction will be more successful financially.

The Y. P. M. & L. Society.

This society, which has become one of the institutions of the town, held its regular meeting last Friday evening. There was a good attendance, the recitations, reading and musical performance were of a high order. The chair was occupied by Mr. Stewart Daly, who discharged the duties of the office in a most creditable manner. The society were the largest taken this visit Toronto this month.

A lunatic named Gouin, in Beauport Asylum for the insane, near Quebec, killed a fellow inmate named Martel, this morning.

Messrs. George Walker and E. W. Rathbun, of Deseronto, have secured the patent from the Dominion Government for the manufacture of gas-block composed of sawdust and tar. The patent also covers the right of controlling the various processes by which gas may be made from this block.

R. S. Mowat, the contractor, who left Kingston suddenly so soon after his marriage, has made an assignment, and will return.

MONDAY, DEC. 31.

Yesterday morning the St. Lawrence Hall
at Brockville, was entirely destroyed by fire.
The guests had a narrow escape. The loss is about $15,000.

Mr. Lanigan, a dry goods merchant, of Ottawa, has caused the arrest of his partner, Mr.
Mauvet, on a charge of embezzlement; $2,000
are missing.

Patrick Garritty, Toronto, a switchman,
was badly crushed at that city last night by a Northern Railway train and died the next morning.

Robert Smith, a G. T. R. employee at Toronto was crushed to death Saturday night by a snow plow.

Miss E. A. Skimmings, of Godrich, presented Sir Richard Cartwright, on Christmas, with a very neat and prettily designed Christmas and New Year's card and a pair of miniature snow shoes.

The city of Baltimore is afflicted with an epidemic of measles, there being four hundred cases.
Sixteen deaths occurred from the disease last week.

TUESDAY, JAN. 1.

Mr. Church, cashier and superintendent for John Dwight & Co., New York, was assailed and knocked senseless yesterday by masked men and robbed of over $2,000.

To-day the Midland Railway passed into the hands of the Grand Trunk Railway, which corporation takes possession and control of that road.

Last night a man named Lee, a carter, with his horse was drowned at the foot of Barrack street, Kingston, while intoxicated. He seems to have driven upon the ice, over the ragged edge of which the animal and its driver passed to death.
The head of the horse was seen under the water
by a skater, and this afternoon the body of the unfortunate man was grappled for and recovered.
This was the third occasion upon which Lee drove into the water.

A dynamite explosion occurred this afternoon on the Ontario and Quebec Railway, in the vicinity of Ashburnham. The dynamite was used frequent contributors during the evening. The programme consisted of singing by Miss Burton of Kingston, her rendition of "Where is Heaven?" being especially fine; Mesdames Mills and Garbut, Misses Briggs, Blair, Burton, Cook, McBean, and Mr. F. Tilley; an appropriate temperance reading by Mr. W. J. Black; addresses by Revs. Pearson and Card and Mayor James. The presentation of colors to the Napanee corps, No. 6, took place after the first part. The presentation was made by Capt. Aitkens of Cobourg in an appropriate speech and the banner was accepted by Lieuts. Lee and Ely on behalf of the corps, the whole company singing "We will Rally Round the Banner." The banner is of red with gold letters. A large cross in the centre is surmounted by a scroll bearing the words, "Victory or Death," and on each side are the letters "S" "A." Near the top on each side are the date of presentation and the No. of the corps. At the base of the cross are the words, "Jesus Bore the Cross for Me," and a scroll at the bottom reads, "We will Fight for the Lord Everywhere." The banner is carried by the corps at their outdoor parades. The concert was very enjoyable. It is to be hoped the Army's next effort in this direction will be more successful financially.

The Y. P. M. & L. Society.

This society, which has become one of the institutions of the town, held its regular meeting last Friday evening. There was a good attendance, the recitations, reading and musical performance were of a high order. The chair was occupied by Mr. Steward Daly, who discharged the duties of the office in a most creditable manner. The receipts were the largest taken this season. A good committee has charge of the preparation for this evening, and intend offering the best programme yet presented. They should have a large attendance.

PARKS' CHURCH.

HAY BAY, Dec. 22, 1883.

We, the members of the Quarterly Conference of the Bay Circuit, in conference assembled, desire to express our regret that our pastor, the Rev. L. A. Betts, is still confined to his home.

It was unanimously resolved to assure him that his salary should be paid in full and that the work, as far as possible, should be kept up. And we pray for his speedy recovery and restoration to his work and family.

By order of the Quarterly Conference.

J. S. MAVEY, Chairman.
THOS. ANDERSON, Secretary.

Mrs. ELIZABETH MASON—Dr. M. Souvielle & Co.: Gentlemen—Yours of last week to hand, and in reply to your enquiry I have much pleasure in stating that from the first time of using the spirometer and the medicine I have improved very much. The bronchitis has entirely left me. I sleep well and have a good appetite. I must also add, that coming to you as I did as a last resort, the cure effected has been wonderful. Gratefully yours, MRS. E. MASON, Jarvis, Ont.

Be Careful What You Eat.

The best medical authorities declare that worms in the human system are often induced by eating too freely of uncooked fruit and too much meat, cheese, etc. Whatever may be the cause, Freeman's Worm Powders are speedy and safe to cure; they destroy the worms and contain their own cathartic to expel them.

made an assignment, and will return.

MONDAY, DEC. 31.

Yesterday morning the St. Lawrence Hall at Brockville, was entirely destroyed by fire. The guests had a narrow escape. The loss is about $15,000.

—Mr. Lanigan, a dry goods merchant, of Ottawa, has caused the arrest of his puriner, Mr. Mauvet, on a charge of embezzlement; $2,000 are missing.

—Patrick Garritty, Toronto, a switchman, was badly crushed at that city last night by a Northern Railway train and died the next morning.

—Robert Smith, a G. T. R. employee at Toronto was crushed to death Saturday night by a snow plow.

—Miss E. A. Skimings, of Godrich, presented Sir Richard Cartwright, on Christmas, with a very neat and prettily designed Christmas and New Year's card and a pair of miniature snow shoes.

—The city of Baltimore is afflicted with an epidemic of measles, there being four hundred cases. Sixteen deaths occurred from the disease last week.

TUESDAY, JAN. 1.

—Mr. Church, cashier and superintendent for John Dwight & Co., New York, was assailed and knocked senseless yesterday by masked men and robbed of over $2,000.

—To-day the Midland Railway passed into the hands of the Grand Trunk Railway, which corporation takes possession and control of that road.

—Last night a man named Lee, a carter, with his horse was drowned at the foot of Barrack street, Kingston, while intoxicated. He seems to have driven upon the ice, over the ragged edge of which the animal and its driver passed to death. The head of the horse was seen under the water by a skater, and this afternoon the body of the unfortunate man was grappled for and recovered. This was the third occasion upon which Lee drove into the water.

A dynamite explosion occurred this afternoon on the Ontario and Quebec Railway, in the village of Ashburnham. The dynamite was used for loosening the earth for the construction of a culvert. Several men were seriously and one dangerously injured. Houses were shaken and windows shattered in the vicinity where the explosion took place.

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 2.

—This morning Thomson & Avery's saw mill, at Sharbot Lake, was destroyed by fire. This is the second time this mill has been burned within six months. The loss is large. The premises were insured for $3,000.

—Detective Doyle, of Hamilton, was fined $50 and costs for accepting a note for $50 from a man named Malcolm.

—Augustus Blair, Kingston, while climbing over a fence last night got his foot caught between the gate post and the fence, falling backwards. He hung in this position for half an hour before he was discovered. He was released when on the eve of death. He was drunk at the time.

—Col. Rathbone, who killed his wife in Hanover and then attempted himself, is not expected to recover.

—Frances Campbell, daughter of a station master at Campbellton, N. B., dropped dead last night while dancing in a house of ill-repute in Montreal.

—At the inquest of the Middlemiss murder held at London to-day, damaging evidence was given against A. E. Wrightman, one of the men arrested, for the murder of Silcox last Friday night.

• A Paralytic Stroke.

W. H. Howard of Geneva, N.Y., suffered with palsy and general debility, and spent a small fortune in advertised remedies, without avail, until he tried Burdock Blood Bitters. It purified and revitalized the blood, caused it to circulate freely, and quickly restored him to health.

—John R. Vert, Hamilton, says: "McGregor's Speedy Cure for Dyspepsia and Indigestion is cheap at fifty times the price asked for it. I am a commercial man, and travel continually, and would no more think of leaving home without a bottle of McGregor's Speedy Cure in my valise than I would of leaving my team at home and going on foot." Free trial bottles at T. A. Huffman's and A. W. Grange's drug stores. Regular size, fifty cents and one dollar.
